THE PREFACE.

AMONG the many Benefits which we reap from History, this is none of the least, that it helps very much to direct us how Religion is to be propagated in the World. The New Testament is very useful to us in this respect; the excellent Rules and Precepts therein prescribed, being not only necessary to be observed, but the wise Conduct of our blessed Saviour, and the Apostles, and other first Planters of it, being also very fit to be Copied by all succeeding Ages, in carrying on the same good Work. And the Histories of the several following Periods of the Church, are likewise in their own Degree, of considerable Use to the same End and Purpose: For the Pious and Charitable Endeavours of our Forefathers, when set before us, do not only excite and animate us to do the like; but the Knowledge of the Causes which hindered the Progress of Religion, sheweth us how to prevent or remove the same for the future, and so to proceed with fairer Prospect of Success.

These Considerations have induced me, to Collect a Narrative of the Endeavours, that have been used to Convert the Popish Natives of Ireland to the Established Religion. It is now the Space of One Hundred and Sixty Years since the Protestant Faith first appeared Publickly there; and yet it hath made much smaller Progress among the Natives, than could be wished, there being still (as is it generally believed) Six Papists

Papists at least, to One Protestant, in that Kingdom, although we have had many Advantages which might help to facilitate this Work; for we have Scripture and Reason of our side, beyond all Contradiction; we have Loyal and Peaceable Principles to ingratiate our Religion with the Higher Powers, and to induce them to promote it; and, some short Interruptions excepted, we have had the Examples of our Monarchs, and the Legal Establishment, with many other Temporal Advantages, to recommend it to the People. So that there must be some great Impediment in this Matter, which ought to be taken away.

It will not therefore be amiss, by looking back into the Times that have passed since the Reformation, to see after what Manner our Ancestors have proceeded in this Work, and to find out the Causes that seemed to have rendred their Endeavours ineffectual; that for the future so good and necessary a Design may not be laid aside, because of the Discouragements which the Apprehensions of former Unsuccessfulness may give. And in order to this, I shall endeavour, at every remarkable Period of the Historical Part, to make such Observations and Reflections as may be useful to this Purpose.

ATTEMPTS
That have been made to Convert the Popish Natives of IRELAND
TO THE Established Religion.

IN the Year of our Lord 1551, and the 5th of Edward VI. the Reformed Religion began to be first publicly professed in Ireland. The Book of Common-Prayer was printed in English the same Year in Dublin, by Order of the Lord Lieutenant and Council, pursuant to Instructions given by the King himself; and it was publicly read to the People, there being many in and about that City, who understood that Language. George Brown, Archbishop of Dublin, was the first Person of Note who embraced the Protestant Communion, and he gave full Proof of the Sincerity of his Conversion; for he was very zealous in propagating the true Religion, and took great Pains in converting others to it. He preached often against the Errors of the Church of Rome, especially against Praying in an unknown Tongue, and denying the People the free Use of the Scriptures. He caused all superstitious Relicks and Images, to be removed out of the two Cathedrals in Dublin, and the rest of the Churches within his Diocess; and made the Creed, Lord's-Prayer, and Ten Commandments, to be set up in their stead. He cheerfully submitted to the King's Order for reading the Liturgy in English, and made a Speech for it at an Assembly of the Archbishops, Bishops, and the rest of the Clergy of Ireland, who were call'd together by the Lord Lieutenant on that Occasion; which had so good effect, that several of the Bishops and Clergy submitted also. And these Endeavours were used to propagate the Reformed Religion among the Old English, and such others as understood the English Tongue.

But George Dowdall, Archbishop of Armagh, and many of the Bishops and inferiour Clergy, opposed this good Work, so that it did not go on so smoothly and prosperously as might be expected. And that religious and hopeful Prince, King Edward the VIth, dying two Years after, this blessed Reformation in Religion, not having Time enough to settle and take Root, was soon pluck'd up and quite overturn'd, by the Accession of Queen Mary to the Throne: In whose Reign, all that had been done by her Royal Brother, was undone and abolished. The Protestant Bishops and Clergy were banished, the Liturgy prohibited, the Scriptures lock'd up in an unknown Tongue, and the Popish pish Superstition and Idolatry every where set up again.

The best, that could be said of this Reign, was, that it was very short, which prevented further Designs against the Protestants to be executed.

And it pleased God, by advancing Queen Elizabeth to the Imperial Crown of these Realms, not only to deliver them from their Fears and Troubles, but also to restore to them the free Exercise of their Religion: For no sooner was that Excellent Princess (who took great Care to plant Religion and Learning, as well as to enlarge her Conquests in that Island) settled in the Possession of the Crown, but She signified Her Royal Pleasure by Her Lieutenant, That the Reformed Religion should be re-established in that Kingdom, which took some effect immediately; for the Mass was laid aside in many Places, and our Liturgy made use of instead of it: Sentences of Scripture were affixed to the Church-Walls, in the place of Popish Trumpery; and Bibles were sent over to be distributed gratis, for the Use of the Common-People, there being but few small Ones to be bought in those Days. And this charitable Design was very much encouraged, if not at first set on Foot, by Dr. Heath Archbishop of York, who sent two large Bibles, to be set up in the Cathedrals of Christ's-Church and St. Patrick in Dublin, for the Benefit of every one, who had a Mind to make use of them; upon which, great Numbers of People resorted thither, that they might have an Opportunity of Reading the Word of God.

This Alteration in matters of Religion, occasioned a great Ferment among the Roman Catholics of Ireland, and disgusted the Natives especially, who were not at all regarded in it: For our publick publick Offices were no more understood by them, than the Mass; and they were as much edified by the one as the other, that is, nothing at all. Instead of the Instructions and Exhortations which their own Clergy used to give them, there was no Care taken to instruct them in a Language which they understood; but they were kept still in the Dark, and left blindfold, to seek for the Kingdom of Heaven as well as they could: So that being instigated in that Juncture, by the King of Spain, and the Pope, they rebelled in a great Body under Shane o Neil, A. D. 1560. Which Rebellion being suppressed the following Year, there was in the Year of our Lord 1563, a Tax laid upon every House-keeper, who would omit to come to Church on Sunday, which being levied exactly, many came rather than they would pay it. This was an effectual Way to bring many of them, especially of the poorer sort, within the Walls of the Church: But it signified nothing towards Converting them to the Truth, as the Event plainly shewed. For although to save the Charge of a Tax, which they were not well able to pay, many of them appeared in Church, and answered to their Names, as they were called by the Church-Wardens: Yet they continued Papists still in their Hearts; and when the first Opportunity offered, they both rebelled and returned to their former Religion, A. D. 1566. From which we may observe,

1. How vain and impracticable a Thing it is, to Convert a Nation by abolishing their Language. This Method is really absurd in the very Reason and Nature of the Thing; for Men cannot be instructed, and consequently converted, by the Use of any Language, but such as they understand; and until they understand our Language, if we would convert them, we must apply to them in their own. And it is not practicable; for if we will consider the great Difficulty of subduing any one Habit or Custom, we shall be easily convinced, that it is too great a Task, to abolish a Religion and a Language at once, and to prevail with a Nation, or Multitude of People, not to speak as they have been used to speak, and not to think and believe as they have been taught to think and believe from their Cradle.

2. It may be observed, that mild and gentle Means are most effectual in Propagating Religion. Our blessed Saviour Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our Faith, who best understood the Nature of Religion, and the right way of planting and spreading it throughout the World, impressed none into his Service, and used no harsh Methods in gaining Men over to his Religion: For Religion is seated in the Mind, and Christ's Kingdom is a spiritual Kingdom, consisting in an entire Sway and Dominion over the Hearts of Men; and therefore we must not expect, that they will sincerely receive it, and submit to it, by any Means but such as are fitted to work upon the Minds and Consciences of Men. It was by such Means as these, that our Saviour converted Men to the Christian Faith, even by proposing it to them with such Arguments as were proper to convince them of the Truth and Goodness of it. And when Men use other Methods of Conversion, it gives Cause of Suspicion, either that they are in the Wrong themselves, that they want better Means of Conviction, and mistrust the Goodness of their Cause: Or if they be in the Right, some will be apt to think, that they decline the painful and laborious Way

Way of convincing Men of their Errors. But besides the Example of our blessed Saviour, which is very worthy of our Imitation, the Spirit of God hath taught us, by St. Paul, 2 Tim. II. 24, 25, 26. in what manner we should deal with those, whom we would instruct, and convert to the Truth. The Servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle to all Men, apt to teach, patient; in Meekness instructing those that oppose themselves, if God peradventure will give them Repentance to the acknowledging of the Truth. Here God, who perfectly knows humane Nature, and the fittest Means of prevailing with it, gives us Intimation, that if we expect that Men should hearken to our Instructions, and receive our good Advice, we must treat them very tenderly, and have a great Care not to vex or irritate them; because Nature abhors to follow the Counsels of an Enemy. But to convert the Irish, by attempting to abolish their Language, or by any severe and disagreeable Methods, seems to be the Reverse of this; it is to think of perswading and convincing them, by enraging and exasperating them, and of gaining their Hearts and Affections, (without which they can never be truly converted) by taking from them, that which is very dear and valuable to them; which is not the way to expel the morbidick Matter, but to poyson the Physick of their Souls: And it is not to bind up and heal, but to rankle and envenom their spiritual Wounds. And therefore it is observed, that Men generally lose their End and Design by such Means, which tempt others to dissemble, and to do Violence to their Consciences, but seldom make true Profelytes. And the Truth of this is confirmed to us by what hath been just now related. For the Means that were used to induce, induce, or rather compel, the Irish Natives to hear English Prayers and Sermons, and to hinder them from receiving any Instruction in their own Tongue, made few or no sincere Converts, and only provoked them (as I have already observed) to rebel on the first convenient Opportunity, and to apostatize, if I may so term it, to that Superstition and Idolatry from which they had not been inwardly converted.

Therefore, it being observed, That the Reformed Religion gained little Ground in Ireland by the aforesaid Means, Queen Elizabeth (for whose Pious Zeal and Princely Bounty, many of the Reformed Churches, besides that of England, have great Reason still to bless God) provided at Her own Charge, a Font of Irish Types, with the other Instruments of the Press, "In hope that God in " Mercy would raise up some to Translate the " New Testament into their Mother Tongue; as William Daniel, Archbishop of Tuam, relates in his Dedication of the Irish Translation of it afterwards to King James the 1st of England. And as Sir James Ware tells us in his Annals of Ireland, in the Year of our Lord 1571, and the 13th of Queen Elizabeth, "The Irish Characters for Printing were " first brought into that Kingdom by Nicholas
" Walsh, Chancellor of St. Patrick's in Dublin, and " John Kearney, Treasurer of the same: And it " was ordered, that the Prayers of the Church
" should be printed in that Character and Language, and a Church set a-part in the chief
" Town of every Diocese, where they were to be " read, and a Sermon preached to the Common-" People, which was instrumental to convert many of the ignorant Sort in those Days. And it may be reasonably supposed, that this good Work

Work had the better Success, for that many Persons among the Clergy and Laity, who were eminent upon the Account of their Rank and Station in the World, as well as their Piety and Learning, used their hearty Endeavours to promote it: For, as the World goes, the Greater any Person is, the greater Influence will his Labours have in all probability upon others. Besides, this is a Work truly Apostolical; it was the chief Business about which the Apostles, and their immediate Successors, the first Christian Bishops, employed themselves. And indeed, considering the great Necessity and Importance of this Work, it deserves the Pains and Industry of the Master-Builders, and of the chief Labourers in the Vineyard. And therefore several Bishops of Ireland, and other Clergymen of eminent Degree in the Church, were very diligent and exemplary in those Days in the Performance of this Duty: They considered, that it was not only a Duty chiefly incumbent upon themselves, but that their good Examples would animate and encourage others; and therefore they set their own Hands to the Work, and it pleased God to bless their Labours with Success: For they were happy Instruments, under God, of turning many to Righteousness. John Kearney, Treasurer of St. Patrick's, composed a Catechism in Irish, which was the first Book printed in Ireland in that Character. Nicholas Walsh, already mentioned, after he had been promoted to the Bishoprick of Offory, began the Translation of the New Testament, but did not live to finish it, being barbarously murdered in his own House, by one Dullard, against whom the good Bishop had issued a Process for Adultery. The aforesaid Mr. Kearney, and Nehemias Donnellan, afterwards Archbishop bishop of Tuam, undertook the same Work; but as we are told by Archbishop Daniel in the said Dedication, " Their godly Endeavours were untimely cut off in God's secret Judgment, and the Weight of the Burthen was cast upon his own Shoulders, which he faithfully discharged by the Publication of the Book, A. D. 1602; the Province of Connaught and Sir William Usher, Clerk of the Council, bearing the Charge of the first Edition. After this, the same Pious and Learned Prelate translated the Book of Common-Prayer into Irish, and printed it A. D. 1608, with a Dedication to the Lord Deputy. And as we have already said, by these Means many of the Natives were converted.

From which we may again observe, that the Human and Christian Methods of Conversion generally prosper, when the contrary turn to nothing: By the former, he that reapeth, receiveth Wages, and gathereth Fruit to Life Eternal, Joh. V. 36. But by the latter, the spiritual Reaper frequently sets the Corn a Fire, and very rarely brings any of it safe into the Barn.

And thus I have traced the Endeavours, that were used to convert the Irish through the Reigns of King Edward the VIth, Queen Elizabeth, and the Beginning of the Reign of King James the Ist, at which Time this Work seems to have met with some Obstructions, or to have been postponed; by what Means, or for what Reasons, we have no clear Light from History; we are left to Conjectures for the most part, which I shall submit to the Consideration of the Reader, after I have first mentioned the two great Obstructions, which did all along (as I humbly conceive) ceive). very much hinder the Conversion of the Irish.

1. And the first was, the unsettled State of the Kingdom: There were frequent Rebellions and Insurrections, which rendered the Thing impracticable, while they lasted: And after they were composed, they left Resentments behind them, which very much obstructed it.

2. There was not a Protestant Seminary of Learning in the Kingdom, until the latter End of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, which occasioned a great Scarcity of Clergy, and especially of such as were capable of instructing the Natives; so that although the Harvest was plenteous, yet the Labourers were few.

But, God be thanked, these Obstacles are now in a great Measure removed: The Kingdom seems to be in a quiet and settled Condition; and a Man may travel through any Part of it to instruct the People, without any Apprehensions of Danger; nay, it is so far from this, that in many Places, he who goes upon that Errand, may expect to be kindly received, and made very welcome.

And although the Number of the Clergy be not equal to all the Wants and Exigencies of that Church, yet it is sufficient to set this Matter on Foot. And there is an excellent Seminary of Learning now flourishing in the Kingdom, in which, as being the fittest Place, there have been several Attempts made, to lay the Foundation of this Work, upon which, in all Probability, a glorious Superstructure had been rais'd, if they had met with due and constant Encouragement.

These Wants and Difficulties could not but very much hinder the Progress of the Reformation in that Kingdom; and when, they were in a great great Measure removed, yet other Impediments succeeded them, which put a great Stop to it in this Reign. For,

1. In the Year of our Lord 1621, the Congregatio de Propaganda Fide was erected at Rome, which then had, and still hath, great Influence in Ireland; especially by means of an intimate Correspondence, and frequent Communications, which were then held betwixt the Natives of Ireland, and their Friends in Spain. And the like Intercourse is still kept up, with all the neighbouring Popish Countries; inso-much, that when any Design is set on foot, to propagate the Reformed Religion among the Natives, and to draw them off from their blind and disloyal Obedience to the Pope, Emissaries are immediately dispatched thither from the Irish Convents abroad, to baffle and defeat it. We may only observe by the way, that if the Congregation at Rome have such Influence in Ireland, it may be presumed, that a Protestant Society of the same Nature, but for much better Purposes, consisting of Persons of Zeal and Piety, Interest and Authority, in that Kingdom, will have much greater Influence in it.

2. The Clergy and Gentry, who were fervent and active in this Work, departed this Life; and it is our Unhappiness to have no Account in History, that their generous and religious Designs were vigorously pursued, until Dr. Bedell went into that Kingdom.

At the same time it must not be passed by, that King JAMES shewed very good Dispositions to promote the Conversion of the Irish, as will appear from the following Account, which I found in a Manuscript in the Honourable Mr. Bridges's Library; of whose great Kindness and Generosity in allowing me the free

Use of it, I reckon my self obliged upon this Occasion to make a grateful Acknowledgment.

The King had given a Commission to the Lord Deputy, Lord Primate, Lord Chancellor, Lord Willmor, Lord Cawfield, Sir William Jones, Sir Dudley Norton, Sir Francis Annesly, Sir Nathaniel Rich, &c. to enquire into, and make a Report of the State of Ireland. And these Orders and Directions are supposed to have been given, upon the Report made thereof to his Majesty; where, after several Rules and Injunctions for enlarging the Maintenance of the Clergy; for encouraging Residence, by making it convenient; for building Cathedral and Parochial Churches; for Prevention of the Alienation of Ecclesiastical Possessions, and Lands given to charitable Uses, these following Orders are given.

“ 32. And we also strictly charge the Lord Deputy and Bishops, to take special Care, that good “ Choice be made of Schoolmasters and Ushers, and “ that none be admitted, but such as will take the “ Oath of Supremacy, and bring up their Scholars “ in true Religion; and that Popish Schoolmasters “ and Ushers be altogether suppressed.

“ 33. And we being highly offended with the Encrease and Insolence of the Jesuits and Priests, “ and Titulary Popish Archbishops, Bishops, and “ such like, that presume to exercise Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction within Our Kingdom of Ireland; “ We do expressly charge and command, That the “ Statute of Secundo Elizabetha, there in force, “ that inflicts heavy Punishment upon such as exercise any Thing to extol or maintain the Power or Jurisdiction, Spiritual or Ecclesiastical, “ of any Foreign Prince, or Prelate, may be put “ in

“ in Execution against such as exercise Ecclesiasti“ cal Jurisdiction by Foreign Power ; and that the “ Proclamation be renewed for the Remove and “ Exclusion of them out of the Kingdom.

36. “ And We do also command, that the New “ Testament, and Book of Common-Prayer, trans“ lated into Irish, be hereafter frequently used in “ the Parishes of the Irishrie ; and that every Non-“ Resident there do constantly keep and continue “ one to read Service in the Irish Tongue.

These Orders were signed Feb. 3. 1623, by H. Falkland, with a Memorandum that they be inrolled: And this is the Title prefixed to them: Orders and Directions concerning the State of the Church of Ireland, and the Possessions thereof, Free-Schools, and other Endowments and Lands given to charitable Uses, for and concerning other Things tending to the Advancement of true Religion, and Maintenance of the Clergy in the said Realm.

And his Majesty being mindful of the same good Design, in a Letter which he sent to Sir Arthur Chichester, Lord Deputy of Ireland, given under his own Signet, at his Mannor of Hampton Court, October 16. 1604. To other good Instructions, adds this, “ We would have a present Consulta“ tion of all such Things as may tend to the bet“ ter Establishment of the true Religion professed.

And the Privy-Council in a Letter to the same Lord-Deputy, dated from the Court at Whitehall, the last of April 1606. send the following Instruction concerning the Propagation of the Protestant Religion in Ireland: “ Conformity must be wrought “ with Time, and by the Care which you must “ take to enlarge the Passage of God’s Word, by “ Choice and Plantation of sufficient and zealous “ Men to teach and preach the same unto his Peo“ ple ; wherein we have more Hope of good Effects, “ (by the Favour of God) than by any sudden or “ violent Course in that Kingdom, where the People “ have so little Means as yet to be instructed.

Before Dr. Beaell went to Ireland, he was for the Apostolical Way of Converting the Natives. And from one of his Letters to Primate Usher, it appears, that when he was Provost of the College of Dublin, he made some Steps towards setting it on this Foot: For there is mention made in one of his Letters, of an Irish Lecture in that Society, to which it is very probable he gave Encouragement. But when he was promoted to the Bishopricks of Kilmore and Ardagh, he shewed in earnest, how much he had this charitable Work at Heart: For he applied himself to it with so much Zeal and Diligence, and used such fit and proper Means for accomplishing it, that from the Success which he had, it is to be presumed, it would have taken great Effect throughout the Kingdom, if the same had been universally used. He learned the Irish Tongue himself, and came to such a degree of Knowledge in it, as to be able to compose an Irish Grammar, and to correct the Translation of the Old Testament into that Language, which he got done, the New Testament and Common-Prayer-Book being already translated into Irish. “ He made a Short Catechism to be published, having English on the one Page, and Irish on the other, together with some Forms of Prayer, and some of the most instructing and edifying Passages of Scripture, and some of St. Chrysostom and Leo’s Homilies, and distributed it all over his Diocese ; and it was so well received by many of the Natives, that it gave gave Grounds of Hope, that further Endeavours of this kind would not be vain and fruitless.

The necessary Books being provided, the next Thing to be done, was to get fit Persons to make use of them ; and in this he was very active and industrious. He observed, that the Irish had been too much neglected by the English, and that due Care had not been taken to propagate Religion and Civility among them ; and therefore he failed not to acquaint some Great Persons about Court, with the true State of Affairs, that so they might be induced, to endeavour to get the proper Remedies applied, or give way to the doing of it. The most effectual Method for performing this, was, to fill the Church with Clergymen able to preach to the Irish in their own Language, which he look'd upon as an absolutely necessary Qualification, in every Minister to be employed under him, whose two Dioceses were almost wholly inhabited by Natives : And therefore he rejected several for want of it. One would think, that the indispensable Obligations that the Clergy lie under, to perform the Offices of Religion to their People in a known Tongue, might have prevented any Opposition from Protestants, or at least have stop'd the Mouths of Gainsayers. But nevertheless, this necessary and commendable Practice rais'd a great Storm against that good Man, and was the Occasion of much Trouble and Uneasiness to him, many looking upon it as an Imposition, which they were not obliged to bear : However, he knew that the Natives were not to be converted otherwise, than by applying to them in a Language which they understood ; and therefore in his Collations, he obliged every Minister to perform Divine Offices in a Tongue understood by the People.

And that this pious and charitable Work might go on more effectually, he encouraged the Clergy to undertake it by his own Example: For (as I have already mentioned) he set himself to learn the Irish Tongue, which is a great Endearment to that People, it being taken as a great Complement by the Natives, to speak to them in their own Language. He conferred frequently with them, and especially with their Priests and Friars. He had the Common-Prayer read every Sunday in Irish in his own Cathedral. He took great Pains to give those whom he endeavoured to convert, a true Sense of Religion, that so they might be Profelytes indeed; and he succeeded according to Expectation, for of the most remarkable of his Converts, only one relapsed in the Rebellion in 1641. And when he had Grounds to believe, that any one's Conversion was real and sincere, he failed not to make such temporal Provision for him, as was proper, or as he conveniently could. And it may be presumed, that according to the good Practice of this wise and learned Prelate, it would contribute somewhat towards reclaiming the Natives from their Errors, if such as come over to our Church from the Romish Communion, were encouraged, according to their several Circumstances and Merits. It is not fit indeed, that any Man should be persuaded, to change his Religion for the Love of Money, or on any worldly Consideration; because he, who doth so, is guilty of great Hypocrisie and Dis-ingenuity before God. But nevertheless, Profelytes should be received with all Civility and Kindness; and when there is Cause to believe, that they are Men of Honesty and Integrity, due Care should be taken to make up, in some measure, the Loss which they generally suffer by disobliging their Friends

Friends and Relations, and to make some Compensation for that Hatred and Ill-will, which they never fail of receiving from the Party which they forsake; and for that Doubtfulness and Suspicion, which too many will be ready to entertain, of the Truth and Sincerity of their Conversion; which cannot but create great Trouble and Uneasiness to any generous and ingenuous Mind. Besides, if Profelytes be not duly countenanced, this will discourage others, and it will be a great Temptation to themselves, to return to their former Errors.

These were the Methods used by this great Man, in converting the Irish Natives; and the most gracious and merciful God (who seldom fails to prosper those, who observe his own Directions) was pleased to bless them with Success: For he prevail'd even with several Priests and Friars to become Protestants, and employed them to convert others.

And whereas the Irish are represented by some, to be so very savage and untractable, that it is not only needless, but also very dangerous to labour among them; the Success which Bishop Beddell had, doth not only confute this; but the great Esteem which they shewed to this best of English Bishops (as they used to call him) in his Lifetime; and the singular Marks of Honour and Affection, which they paid him at his Funeral, even in the great Heat and Fury of the Rebellion, do shew from Experience, that the Irish may be drawn by the Cords of a Man, and that gentle Usage and Christian Treatment, will prevail with them, when the contrary Methods will not. For they suffered him (although he was a Heretick in their Opinion) to be interred in his own Burial-Place, desiring, if his Friends thought fit, that the Office proper for that Occasion, might be used according to our Liturgy. And the Chief of the Rebels gathered their Forces together, and accompanied his Body to the Church-yard in great Solemnity, and discharged a Volley of Shot at his Interment, crying out in Latin, Quiescat in Pace ultimus Anglorum.

When Bishop Bedell was labouring with so good Success in the Vineyard, the Convocation, which met at Dublin 1634, took the Conversion of the Irish into Consideration, and made several Canons for carrying it on. ‘ They ordered, that for the ‘ Instruction of the Natives, part of the Service ‘ should be read in Irish, where half, or most of ‘ the Congregation is Irish. That Ministers in ‘ their Preachings, Catechizings, and private Con- ‘ ferences, should endeavour to root out all ungodly, ‘ superstitious, and barbarous Customs; mentioning ‘ some used by the Irish. That where most of the ‘ People were Irish, the Church-wardens should pro- ‘ vide, at the Charge of the Parish, a Bible and two ‘ Common-Prayer-Books, in the Irish Tongue. That ‘ where the Minister is an Englishman, such a Clerk ‘ may be chosen (if it may be) as shall be able to ‘ read those Parts of the Service, which shall be ap- ‘ pointed to be read in Irish. Nay, there is so great ‘ Stress laid upon this Work, that not only every ‘ Preaching Minister, but in some Cases, the Bishop ‘ of the Diocese, is required (as his important Affairs ‘ will permit) to confer with Popish Recusants, and ‘ by all good Means to endeavour to reclaim them ‘ from their Errors.

If these Canons had been constantly and universally observed, it is probable that the good Ends and Purposes, for which they were made, had been in a great measure attained. But we have little or no Account of this in the Histories of those Times; and it doth not appear, that any Person of eminent Degree in the Kingdom, shewed such Regard to them as Bishop Bedell, who, notwithstanding the apparent Goodness of the Work, the Unexceptionableness of the Means, and the remarkable Success which he had in it, yet met with great Difficulties, and had much Opposition given him, and that even from considerable Persons of his own Communion. It is very melancholy to reflect upon the Obstructions and Difficulties, that good Designs commonly meet with in the World: Wicked Men will oppose them, because they are good; and even good Men will sometimes discourage them, because they take a wrong View of them, or because the manner of proposing them, or the Means by which they are to be accomplished, are not altogether agreeable and well-pleasing to them. And it was this good Bishop's Misfortune to meet with such cross Accidents: For great Pains were taken to give the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Earl of Strafford, who was then Chief Governour of Ireland, wrong Apprehensions of what he was doing. Instead of joining with him, some, who preferr'd worldly Policy to the Rules and Methods of the Gospel, exclaimed against the Course which he took, as unfeasible and impracticable: And by these Practices, the good Work, which he was engaged in, was much obstructed, and went on more slowly, than otherwise in all likelihood it would have done.

The great Rebellion broke out soon after, which put a full Stop to this Work, and which could not but at the same time convince too many, who felt felt the dreadful Effects of it, how much it was their Interest, as well as their Duty, to convert the Irish from those pernicious Principles, that infligated almost their whole Nation to commit so great Cruelties, and unparallel'd Barbarities, upon such Protestants, as were then under their Power. And this, one would think, might be sufficient Warning to the present Generation, not to neglect a Work, which tends so much to their own Security and Preservation, as well as the Happiness, both Temporal and Eternal, of others.

After this Rebellion was over, the Remembrance of what was past, made so deep an Impression upon the Minds of many Protestants, who suffered in their own Persons, Estates, and Relations; and produced such keen Resentments, that the Thoughts of this Work seem to have been laid aside for some time: And (except the Publication of a Catechism, having one Column in English, and the opposite Column in Irish, in the Year 1652, called, The Christian Doctrine) after all the Enquiry that I could make, I cannot learn that there was any thing done towards their Conversion, until about 20 Years after the Restauration; to which Omission, the great Scarcity of Clergy at that Time did not a little contribute, as may be reasonably supposed.

Mr. Boyle, the great Christian Philosopher, was the first, who did any thing to purpose, towards setting this Work on foot again: He caused a Font of Irish Types, to be cast at his own Charge, and an able Printer to be instructed, for printing the necessary Books in that Language; and made the Church Catechism, with the Elements of that Language, to be printed in Irish in the Year 1680. Soon after, he resolved to re-print the New Testament stament at his own Expence, and encouraged very bountifully a Proposal for Re-printing the Old Testament also, subscribing 50*l.* for his Part, that so the whole Word of God, one of the best Instruments of Conversion, might be put into the Hands of the Irish. The present Lord Arch-Bishop of Canterbury was concerned with Mr. Boyle in this Work, and contributed liberally towards defraying the Expence of the Press. And that this Edition of the Bible in Irish, might be the better done, after the Translation of it had been revised, and corrected by Mr. Kirk, a Beneficed Minister in England, but a Native of Scotland, and well skilled in the Irish Tongue; he sent it to Ireland, to the present Lord Primate there, who was then Provost of the College of Dublin, that with the Assistance of the most learned Natives in that Kingdom, he might make such Amendments as were requisite: And his Grace assisted at the Revising of the whole Work himself, and took Care that nothing should be wanting, to render it as conformable to the Original, as might be expected. The New Testament was published in the Year of our Lord 1681, having a large Preface prefixed to it; and the Old Testament came out in 1685; and many Copies of them were sent to Ireland, and the Highlands of Scotland. One Mr. Higgins, a Convert from the Church of Rome, was useful in compleating this Work: He was employed at the said Primate's own Charge, to teach the Irish Language in the College of Dublin, and was afterwards admitted into Holy Orders, and presented to a Parish in the County of Tipperary, where, as I have been informed, he hath done much Good, by converting many to the Truth.

It doth not appear, that any further Progress was made in this Work, until after the late Revolution ; which is another flagrant Instance of the Necessity of accomplishing it : For if it had not been for the great Number of Papists in Ireland, (who were fit Instruments for Promoting Popish Designs, both there and elsewhere) it is probable that such precipitate Attempts had not been made, towards bringing Property into these Kingdoms.

After the famous Siege of Londonderry was rais'd, many of the Irish Natives having left their Habitations in the Barony of Inishowen, in the County of Donegal, and followed the Irish Army to the Southern Parts of Ireland ; several Families went from the Highlands of Scotland, and settled in their Places. These Highlanders being Protestants, but not understanding English, petitioned the then Lord Bishop of Derry, now Lord Arch-Bishop of Dublin, to send a Minister to perform Divine Offices to them in their own Language ; which was readily granted, and two Ministers were encouraged to preach in Irish in that Barony, one of them having a Benefice, and the other a competent Allowance from the Bishop : And by the Blessing of God upon their Labours, they got four or five hundred Hearers, none of which understood English.

The good Effects, of setting up these two Irish Preachers in the Diocese of Derry, were so apparent, that several of the same sort were, and still are, for the same Reasons, employed in the Northern Parts of the County of Antrim ; which being also deserted by the Irish, upon the landing of the English Army, near Carickfergus in 1689, many Families from the Western Isles of Scotland, who understood no other Language but Irish, settled there. At their first going over, they went to Church ; but not understanding the Divine Service celebrated there, they soon went over to the Communion of the Church of Rome, only for the Benefit of such Exhortations, as the Popish Priests usually give their Congregations in Irish. And when they were asked the Reason, why they did so? They said, "It was better to be of their Religion, than none at all: One of which was unavoidable, if Care were not taken to perform Divine Offices to them in a known Tongue. Some observing the ill Consequences of this Omission, and perceiving from this Instance, if proper Means were not used to prevent it, that the Highlanders (who remove in considerable Numbers into that Kingdom) must be Papists or Dissenters, or of no Religion; a Petition was presented to the Bishop of Down, requesting that they might have a Minister, to officiate to them in their own Tongue: Upon which Mr. Duncan mac Arthur, was sent to them, who performed the Offices of Religion to them in their own Language, to their great Satisfaction. This Minister dying soon after, Mr. Archibald mac Collum, was appointed by the Bishop to succeed him in the same Office; in which he was so prosperous, that he hath not only brought back to our Church, such Highlanders as had lapsed to Popery, but hath also converted many of the Natives of Ireland; and is, as I am credibly informed, still gaining more to the Established Religion. And there are besides, three or four other such Preachers in that County, having every one of them a considerable Congregation. By these Means, many Highlanders, and some Popish Natives, are added to our Church; whereas in other Places, where such Care is not taken of them, the Natives do not only continue in Popery,
but

but

but many of the Highlanders are drawn off to separate Meetings, or to the Romish Superstition and Idolatry.

In the Year 1702, the Reverend Nicholas Brown, Rector of the Parishes of Donacavy, Dromore, and Rosforry, in the Diocese of Clogher, applied himself with great Zeal and Industry to the Conversion of the Irish, being thereunto advised and encouraged by the present Lord Bishop of Clogher, and also assisted and countenanced in it by Audley Mervin Esquire, one of the Knights of the Shire for the County of Tyrone. He was a perfect Master of the Language, and had a happy Faculty of expressing Terms of Divinity, and giving them an agreeable Turn in Irish. He made it his Business, in the first place, to gain the Hearts and Affections of the Natives, by treating them with great Kindness and Humanity, and particularly by being very charitable to the Poor among them. And observing, that they were wonderfully pleased, to hear Divine Service in their own Tongue, he took all Opportunities of instructing them, and administering the Ordinances of Religion to them in Irish, by appointing publick Meetings with them, going to their Houses, and attending them at the Places, where they usually assembled to hear Mass: He order'd Matters so, as to be with them just when Mass was ended, before the Congregation was dispersed, and then he read our Prayers to them in their own Language. Upon one of these Occasions, the Popish Priest being much troubled to see his Congregation joining in our Service with great Devotion and Attention, told them aloud, " That our Church had stolen those Prayers from the Church of Rome : To which a grave old Native answer'd : " That if it was so, they had stoln

“ the best, as Thieves generally do. Mr. Brown's Success was, in some measure, proportioned to his Labours: For he did not only convert many to the Established Church, (who have continued in her Communion ever since) but also drew, the Generality of his Popish Neighbours, into a good liking of our Religion. And because this shews how practicable the Conversion of the Irish is, if fit Means be used for attaining that End; I shall, for the Satisfaction of the Reader, add here the undeniable Testimony of such as were Eye-Witnesses of his Labours and Success.

" ction at what they heard ; that the Popish Priests
 " were so sensible of the Alteration these Endeavours made upon their People, that they af-
 " frightened them with unusual Threatnings ; that " however, several of them became Converts to
 " the Protestant Religion ; and that We verily " believe many more would have renounced their " Errors, had the said Mr. Brown continued longer among them ; that from his Removal to his " Parish of Drumore, till the Time of his Death,
 " he continued the same Endeavours, and as we " are credibly informed, with the same or better
 " Success ; and that to this Day, the Memory of " the said Mr. Brown, is upon that account valuable among the Popish Natives of these Parts,
 " as in their common Discourse we have often " heard them declare. In Testimony of the Truth " hereof, We have hereunto set our Hands, and " affixed our Corporation Seal this 28th Day of " January, Anno Dom. 1701, 12.

January 24th, 1711.

James Murphy, a Person of a good Character, and known in this Corporation, came voluntary before me, and made Oath on the Holy Evangelist of the Truth of the above Certificate.

William Ball, Provost.

To the Reverend Mr. John Richardson at Belturbet.

Eniskillen, January 24, 1711, 12.

Reverend Sir,

“ I Had the Favour of yours, by your Bro “ ther, wherein you desired me to signify “ to you what I know of Mr. Brown's Endeav “ ours to convert the Irish Papists in this Coun “ try, which I frequently heard him speak of, and “ will relate to you, as justly as I can: He had “ Intimation given to the Irish hereabouts, that

“ he intended to read Divine Service in the Irish “ Tongue, and appointed a Time and Place for “ that purpose; several of ’em came to hear him, “ and seem’d to be much surpriz’d at, but well-“ pleas’d with what they heard, and ingenuously “ confess’d, that they did not expect such Prayers “ and Discourses, and that they were better than “ their own: The Prayers he us’d, were those “ in our Common-Prayer-Book, especially in the “ Communion-Service; and the Discourses he read, “ were the Epistle and Gospel for the Day, our “ Saviour’s Sermon on the Mount, and other se“ lect Portions of the Holy Scriptures: This made “ such an Impression on ’em, that they entreated “ Mr. Brown to meet them again, which he did “ on several Sundays, so successfully, that the Con“ gregation increas’d more than he expected, and “ attended him duly, till the Popish Priests in the “ Neighbourhood, being alarm’d at it, us’d some “ Means to take ’em away; (notwithstanding this) “ there was a pretty good Congregation, when“ ever he was able to go to ’em: Had not a “ Load of Distempers, he laboured under, con“ fin’d him to his House, a long time before he “ dy’d, I doubt not but his Attempts in bringing “ over the Irish, wou’d have been successful; for “ he was a Man of an exemplary Life and Con“ versation, that understood the Irish Tongue, and “ had Abilities and Inclinations to do good Ser“ vice that way. I waited on him several times “ in his last Sickness; he was pleas’d to commu“ nicate his Thoughts to me about the Conver“ sion of the Irish, which he seem’d to have a “ most tender Concern for, and told me, that if “ the Convocation wou’d be pleas’d to take it in“ to their Consideration, and cou’d prevail on the Parliament to encourage the Building of Churches, and to establish Irish Preachers and Schoolmasters in every Diocese in the Kingdom, he did not doubt, but the Success wou'd be great within few Years; to which he thought the Translation of some choice Books into Irish, wou'd be conducive: The first Part of Thomas à Kempis was (by his Care, and at his Expence) translated into Irish, which I lately saw in Manuscript among his Papers; the Characters are fairly written, and the Translation (as I'm inform'd) is exact: I presume it may be had for a reasonable Consideration; if you think 'twill be for your Purpose, pray let me know it, and I'll endeavour to procure it for you on as easie Terms as I can.

I am,

Dear Sir,

Your most Affectionate Brother

And Humble Servant

William Gratan.

March

March 3, 1703. the following Resolution was sent from the Lower, to the Upper-House of Convocation.

“ RESOLVED, That the endeavouring the speedy “ Conversion of the Papists of this Kingdom, “ is a Work of great Piety and Charity; in or“ der to which, it is the Opinion of this House, “ that Preachers, in all the Dioceses of this King“ dom, preaching in the Irish Tongue, wou’d be “ a great Means of their Conversion. And there“ fore that Application be made to the most Re“ verend, and Right Reverend the Lords Arch“ bishops and Bishops, that they take into their “ Consideration, what Number of such Preach“ ers will be necessary in every Diocese, and how “ they may be supported.

Their Graces and Lordships Answer.

“ WE think, that endeavouring the Conver“ sion of the Papists is very commendable.
“ And as to Preaching in the Irish Tongue, We “ think it useful where it is practicable.

The Reverend Mr. Walter Atkins, Treasurer of the Cathedral Church of Cloyne, and Vicar of the Parish of Middleton, in the County of Cork, and Diocese of Cloyne, was the next who put his Hand strenuously to this Work; whereof I had the following Account from himself.
Soon after he was collated, he set himself to acquire a competent Knowledge in the Irish Tongue, to which he was not altogether a Stranger before.

Then he proceeded to perform the Offices of Religion to the Natives, in their own Language; to which End, the Earl of Intiquin furnished him with an Irish Common-Prayer-Book, and the Bishop of Cloyne gave him Encouragement. He buried their Dead according to the Liturgy of our Church, which the Living liked so well, that they expressed great Devotion at it, and joined their Voices in the Lord's Prayer, and the Responses before it. And one of them was heard to say at a Burial in the Church-yard of the Cathedral. That if they could have that Service always, they would go no more to Mass. In process of time, his Labours of this kind became so acceptable to the Natives, that they sent for him, of their own accord, from all Parts of his Parish, to baptize their Children, to visit their Sick, to bury their Dead, to Church their Women, and to solemnize Matrimony to such of them as were to be married; insomuch that he hath married six or eight Couple of a Day. And one of the Natives being dangerously sick, told him, "That if he would attend him in his Extremity, he would not send for the Romish Priest. And by these Means this worthy Gentleman left the Popish Priest so little to do in his Parish, that one of the Chief of the Natives, "desired him "to forbear marrying so many of them; because "this being an Article of great Profit to the Popish Clergy, the Priest would starve for want "of Bread, if it were taken from him. This hath been Mr. Atkins's Practice for several Years, and he continues it with the same Success.

Anno Domini 1709. The Upper-House sent a very pious and charitable Message to the Lower-House of Convocation, with the Contents of which they very readily complied in the following manner.

Sessio 166a. Die Mercurii 1mo. viz. Junii, Anno Dom. 1709.

According to the Order of the Day, the Prolocutor with his Assessors, went to the Upper-House with the following Message.

“ I am commanded by the Lower-House of “ Convocation, to give Your Graces and Lord“ ships their humble Thanks for Your Message “ relating to Recusants, and for the great Regard “ You were pleased to express therein, for the “ Lower-House of Convocation: And to acquaint “ Your Graces and Lordships, That they will pro“ ceed in that important Work you have recom“ mended to them, with all the Expedition that “ a Matter of such Moment will admit of. And “ soon returning, he signified, that in Obedience “ to the Command of this House, he waited on “ the Lords of the Upper-House, with the above “ Message, but received no Answer.

The Reverend Dean Cox, made the following Report from the Committee, to consider the Paper sent down from the Lords last Session, which being again publicly read and debated Paragraph by Paragraph, the same was agreed to with some Amendments.

The Paper sent down from the Lords.

“ THIS House considering, with great Com“ passion, the Condition of the Recusants “ of this Kingdom, and conceiving great Hopes “ from the present Juncture of Affairs, that many “ of them may be prevailed upon to join them“ selves in Communion with the established “ Church, do think themselves obliged to thank “ God for putting such a favourable Opportuni“ ty into their Hands, and to use more than or“ dinary Endeavours at this Time to improve it.

“ This being a Matter of great Concern to all “ Protestants, and particularly to the Clergy of “ this Kingdom, requires the united Application “ of them all, and highly deserves the most se“ rious Thoughts of the Convocation.

“ And therefore this House hath thought fit to “ call in the Assistance of their Brethren of the “ Lower-House, and do with all Earnestness re“ commend to them the Consideration of this “ weighty Affair, desiring them to draw up such “ Arguments as may be most convincing, and to “ propose such Methods of addressing to Recu-“ sants, as may be most perswasive and effectual,
 “ and to communicate to this House, as there “ shall be Occasion, the Progress made in this “ charitable Work, that by God’s Blessing on our “ joint Labours, it may be brought to Perfe“ ction.

“ The Bishops are at present, so engaged by their “ constant Attendance in Parliament, that they “ have more than ordinary Occasion at this Time, “ for the Assistance of the Lower-House, to pre“ pare and digest this Matter.

The

The Resolves agreed to concerning the said Paper, by the Lower House of Convocation.

“ Resolved, That the House should be pleased “ to appoint Three Members to consider of, and “ draw up in the shortest and plainest Method, “ such Arguments as may be most proper to be “ offered to Popish Recusants, with all conveni“ ent Expedition.

“ Resolved, That every Member of this House,
“ who shall think fit to suggest any Arguments “ proper to be made use of on this Occasion, shall “ be desired to communicate the same as soon as “ possible; in Writing, to the Persons so appoint“ ed.

“ Resolved, That the Holy Bible, and Liturgy
“ of the Church, be printed in the Irish Lan“ guage in the English Character.

“ Resolved, That some Person may be appoint“ ed to prepare a Short Exposition of the Church “ Catechism, particularly fitted for the Instructi“ on of the Popish Recusants, and that the same “ be printed in Irish and English.

“ Resolved, That some fit Persons may be pro“ vided and encouraged to Preach, Catechize, and “ perform Divine Service in the Irish Tongue, “ at such Times and Places as the Ordinary of “ each Diocese, with the Consent of the Incum“ bent of the Parish where such Offices shall be “ performed, shall direct.

“ Resolved, That such Clergymen of each “ Diocese as are qualified by their Skill in the “ Irish Language, for this Work, and are wil“ ling to undertake, it, may have the Preference, “ not

“ not only in their own Parishes, but in any other “ Parts of the Diocese.

“ Resolved, That such Priests as are converted “ from the Popish Religion, and are judged to be “ qualified for this Work, by the Ordinary of “ the Diocese, may be particularly employed in “ it, and be encouraged by some Addition to “ the Allowance already settled on them by Act “ of Parliament, as they shall approve themselves “ by their Diligence therein.

“ Resolved, That in order to supply the Cures “ of such Clergy-men as shall be employed in this “ Work, or to perform the same where there are “ no Beneficed Clergymen, nor converted Priests “ qualified for it, one or more Ministers shall be “ provided in each Diocese, who shall be engaged “ in the Service of no particular Cure.

“ Resolved, That the Ministers of each Parish, “ be required to make a Return of the Number of “ Popish Families within their respective Parishes, “ to the Bishop of the Diocese, in Three Years.

“ Resolved, That to defray the Charges of pur“ suing the Measures laid down in the forego“ ing Resolutions, the Parliament be applied to,
 “ to make such Provision as they shall judge ne“ cessary.

“ Resolved, That Application be made to Her “ Majesty, for granting Letters Patents to Erect “ a Corporation capable of receiving and dispo“ sing charitable Contributions, for promoting “ the Conversion of Papists in this Kingdom.

Besides the former Means, we must not omit to mention those which have been lately used in the College of Dublin, to promote the Conversion of the Irish. The Reverend Dr. Hall, present

ent Vice-Provost, supported for some Time, at his own Charge, one Denny, to teach Irish privately to such of the Scholars as had a Desire to learn that Language. And the present Arch-Bishop of Dublin did, and doth still encourage Mr. Lyniger, to teach it publickly. There is also a small Allowance settled in that House for a few Natives, to which, if more were added by the pious Charity of Persons disposed to encourage this Work, and a constant Salary settled for an Irish Lecturer, there might be a sufficient Number of Scholars trained up within a few Years, to instruct the Popish Natives in their own Language. And as it is much in the Power of that venerable Society, to do great Service to Religion this way, so the worthy and learned Provost and Fellows thereof, have shewed their good Dispositions, to do their Parts in promoting this good Work, by contributing liberally towards the Support of the said Lyniger, and by giving him the following Certificate, towards procuring him farther Encouragement; which I thought fit to insert here, not doubting but the Judgment and Opinion of so Eminent a Body, will carry its due Weight and Influence along with it.

“ WE the Provost and Fellows of Trinity “ College, Dublin, do certifie, That Mr.
 “ Charles Lyniger hath, for the Space of Three “ Years last past, with our Consent and Appro“ bation, taught many of the Students in the said “ College the Irish Language, who have made a “ considerable Progress therein. And we are “ humbly of Opinion, That if the said Work “ were promoted and encouraged, it might prove “ a

“ a Means, by God’s Blessing, to convert the Irish “ Natives, and bring them over to the Established “ Church.

In the Beginning of 1710, when most of the Popish Priests in Ireland had, by declining the Oath of Abjuration, render’d themselves liable to great Penalties, if they exercised their Function; they forbore, for the greatest Part, to perform any Religious Offices: So that for some Time their People went to no Publick Worship, and many of their Children wanted Baptism. This occasioned great Complaints and Murmuring among the Irish, and brought severe Reflections from some Protestants. It seemed to be hard Usage, to deny them the Use of their own Religion, and supply them with no other; by which Means, they must either be abandoned to utter Darknes and Barbarity, or given up as a Prey to Deceivers.

Therefore, to prevent this, some Clergymen of the Established Church, applied themselves, in that seasonable Juncture, to the Conversion of the Irish. They performed Divine Offices to them with good Success. For the People attended with great Devotion, and expressed much Satisfaction at the hearing our Prayers in their own Language. It was a joyful Surprise to them, and like giving Sight to the Blind. They openly declared, That our Publick Service was very good: That they liked Irish Prayers much better than Latin: That they disapproved of Praying in an unknown Tongue: And, since their own Priests were taken from them, they would join in our Worship, if it were celebrated in their own Language. Some of them were observed to be much affected, and highly pleased, when the Word of God (which rejoiceth the Heart, and enlightneth the Eyes, Psal. XIX. 8.) was read to them: And it was very remarkable, that two Men, of thirty Years at least, were so much taken with it, that they bought Frimmers, and learned to read, that so they might be able to search the Scriptures themselves.

This good Beginning giving Grounds to hope, that further Endeavours of this kind would not be vain and fruitless among them, one of the forementioned Clergymen bought a Font of Irish Types in London, in order to print the Bible, Liturgy, and such other Books in the Irish Language, as might be necessary or useful for their Conversion: And a Proposal to this Purpose being drawn up, and laid before several noble and worthy Persons of Great Britain and Ireland, they approved of the same, desiring that those Books should be printed with all Expedition, by Subscription, and offering to contribute towards the defraying the Charge of the Press.

But this Affair immediately took another Turn, and was set on a much better Foot (as it is hoped) by the good Advice and Assistance of the Honourable Francis Annesley Esq; of Lincolns-Inn-Fields, who was pleased at first, and ever since, with Zeal

Zeal and Charity, equal to his other great Abilities and Qualifications, to lay hold of all Opportunities of setting forward this Work. When he was first acquainted with the Design, he approved of it, and offered to be a Contributor; and withal advised, that, (the Conversion of the Irish being a Work so necessary to be set about, and of so great Advantage to these Kingdoms,) for the better and more effectual carrying of it on, it was requisite, it should be done at the publick Charge; and that he did not doubt, but his Grace the Duke of Ormond, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, would both encourage and support it himself: And would also intercede with the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, to favour and cherish so useful and expensive an Undertaking, with Her Royal Countenance and Encouragement.

In order to lay this Affair upon so good a Foundation, he recommended it to the Right Honourable Mr. Southwell, Secretary of State for Ireland, who approving of the Design, and declaring it was his Belief, that it would be very acceptable to the Duke of Ormond, the Proposal was enlarged, so as to comprehend every Thing, that was deemed requisite towards the Conversion of the Irish.

Then it was laid before the Lord Bishop of Kil- and several of the Nobility, Clergy, and Gentry of Ireland, who consented that it should be presented to the Duke of Ormond in their Names: And it was particularly submitted to the Consideration of the Right Honourable the Earl of Anglesey, whose Approbation gave the Design a very fair and hopeful Prospect, it being hardly to be questioned, but the favourable Opinion and Countenance of an Eminent Peer of so great an Under-

Understanding, and of so remarkable a Disposition to promote every good Work, would have its due Influence upon others.

When Things were thus prepared, the following Memorial was presented to the Duke of Ormond.

To His Grace JAMES Duke of ORMOND,
Lord Lieutenant General, and General
Governour of Ireland.

The Humble MEMORIAL of several of the Nobility of Ireland, the Lord Bishop of Killmore, and several of the Gentlemen and Clergymen of that Kingdom.

“ WHEREAS nothing tends more effectually to promote the Common Welfare “ of Ireland, than the Conversion of the Popish “ Natives to the Protestant Religion; whereby
“ the English Interest wou’d be better secured, “ Trade and Industry encreased, and both the Spiritual and Temporal Good of the Irish themselves advanced in that Kingdom. And whereas,
“ in order to obtain these happy Ends, several “ Laws have been lately made in Ireland, to discourage and weaken Popery in that Kingdom, “ and one Statute particularly hath been enacted “ to prevent the Succession of Popish Clergy, “ by virtue whereof, the Number of Popish “ Priests is already sensibly decreased in it;
“ and it is probable, that in some Counties, the “ whole Succession may be extinct within a few “ Years. And whereas the Natives, where Trial “ hath

" hath been made, have expressed great Satisfac" tion upon hearing Divine Service perform'd in " their own Tongue. And lastly, whereas there " are no printed Books of Religion (except a very " few Bibles, and Common-Prayer-Books) now
 " extant in Irish; therefore that our Pure and " Holy Religion may be propagated among them,
 " by Evangelical and Religious Means, and that " so many Souls may not be abandoned to utter " Ignorance, Infidelity, and Barbarity on the " one side, or left a Prey to Deceivers on the " other; it is humbly proposed as follow-
 " eth:

I. " That some Numbers of New-Testaments
 " and Common-Prayer-Books, Catechisms and " Expositions thereon, Whole Duty of Man,
 " and select Sermons upon the principal Points
 " of Religion, be translated and printed in the " Irish Character and Tongue; in order to which,
 " the only Set of Irish Characters now in Bri- " tain, is bought already; and that those Books
 " be distributed in the Irish Families that can " read, but especially be given to such Ministers
 " as shall endeavour to convert them, and to " give them a true and practical Sense of Reli" gion.

II. " That the whole Nation may in Time be " made both Protestant and English, That Chari" ty-Schools be erected in every Parish in Ireland,
 " for the Instruction of the Irish Children gratis,
 " in the English Tongue, and the Catechism, and " Religion of the Church of Ireland.

III. " That in order to the carrying on the fore" going Designs, in the preceding or any other " Methods that shall be thought requisite to pro" mote

“ mote the same, a Charter be sued out from “ Her Majesty, constituting an Incorporated So“ ciety of the Well-disposed to so good a Work, “ consisting of the Lord Primate of all Ireland, as “ President, the Arch-Bishops and Bishops, some “ of the Nobility, Clergy, and Gentry of Ire- “ land; empowering them to take Subscriptions, “ receive Benefactions, make Purchases, and hold “ Courts and Consultations for the more effectual “ promoting of the same.

IV. “ That such of the Lords Arch-Bishops,
 “ and Bishops of Ireland, as Your Grace thinks “ fit, be consulted about this Proposal; and if “ they approve of the same, that with their Ad“ vice and Concurrence, a Petition be drawn up “ and presented to Her Majesty, for constituting “ such an Incorporated Society for converting the “ Irish Papists.

May it therefore please Your Grace to countenance and encourage this Undertaking, in such manner as in Your great Wisdom Your Grace may think fit.

The Duke gave it a very kind Reception, expressing his good Intention to give it all the Encouragement, that might be expected from him.
 And that no Time might be lost, he sent it to Ireland, with a favourable Letter in its behalf, to the Lords Justices, desiring that they might lay it before the Lord Primate, and the Arch-Bishops and Bishops then in Dublin, for their Opinion as to the Usefulness of the Work, and what were fit to propose to Her Majesty therein.

in Their Graces and Lordships expressed in their Answer, Their good Thoughts of the Subject Matter laid before them; but withal intimated, that it would require the Help, and Advice of the Parliament and Convocation.

And therefore, in order to prepare Matters for those venerable Bodies, the Duke of Ormond obtained a License from Her Majesty to the Convocation, among other Points, to consider of, and agree upon the most proper and effectual Methods to be used, for the Conversion of the Irish. And it was thought adviseable, That the whole Affair should be laid before the Queen, in hope that Her Majesty's Countenance and Authority would be very effectual towards promoting the Design, and making it a general Work throughout the Kingdom. To this End, the ensuing Petition was presented to Her Majesty.

To the QUEEN's Most Excellent Majesty.

The Humble PETITION of us your Majesty's most Loyal and most Dutiful Subjects, whose Names are underwritten ;

HUMBLY SHEWETH,

“ THAT whereas the Want of the necessary Means of propagating the Protestant Religion among the Natives of Ireland, hath given Popish Priests and Jesuits great Advantage of keeping the said Natives in their Errors and Superstitions, and in a blind Obedience to the Foreign Jurisdiction of the Church of Rome ; and also hath given them an Opportunity of corrupting them with Principles, and “ exciting

“ exciting them to Practices of very dangerous “ Consequence to Your Majesty’s sacred Person “ and Government.

“ And whereas the Conversion of the Natives “ of Ireland to the Protestant Religion, is a Work, “ which, besides the great and many Benefits, both “ Spiritual and Temporal, which wou’d thereby “ accrue to themselves, must also bring a con“ siderable Addition to the Strength of Your “ Majesty’s Imperial Crown, and wou’d tend very “ much to preserve, and promote the Security and “ Tranquillity of Your British Subjects in that “ Kingdom, and to encrease the Wealth and Im“ provement thereof.

“ And whereas divers Laws having been lately “ made to weaken the Popish Interest in Ireland, “ and one particularly to extinguish the Succes“ sion of the Popish Clergy; It is to be hoped, “ that by the Divine Blessing, these Means may “ prove successful for attaining the happy Ends “ for which they were intended, if they be in “ due time seconded with proper Methods of in“ structing the Irish, and of converting them from “ their Errors. And whereas several of the No“ bility, Bishops, Clergy, and Gentry of Ireland, “ and other Your Majesty’s good Subjects, have,
 “ in this seasonable Juncture, shewed their good “ Dispositions to apply themselves heartily to “ this Work, and are very desirous that those “ Helps and Encouragements may be given to “ it which are necessary to make it a general “ Work throughout the Kingdom.

“ And whereas, not only to the Beginning, but “ also to the carrying on this Work, it will be “ requisite, that Ministers and Catechists, duly “ qualified to instruct them, be provided and en“couraged to be sent among them; that necessary Books be printed for their Instruction, in “the Principles of true Religion; and that Charity Schools be erected likewise, for instructing “their Children gratis, in the English Tongue, “and in the Protestant Religion.

“And whereas it is humbly conceived, That if “Your Majesty would be pleased to constitute,
 “by Your Royal Charter, an incorporated Society for promoting the Conversion of the Irish, “and their Instruction in such Principles as will “retain them in due Obedience to Your Majesty, “it would be the most effectual Means of “attaining the same.

“And whereas the Divine Providence seems “to have reserved so great and so good a Work,
 “to be one of the peculiar Glories of Your Majesty’s most happy Reign.

“May it therefore please Your most Sacred “Majesty, to Erect, Constitute, and Appoint by “Your Royal Charter, a Corporation, by the “Name and Title of the (*Society for propagating
 “the True Reformed Religion, as it is established “in the Kingdom of Ireland, among the Popish Natives thereof*) empowering the said Society to “Collect, Receive, Manage, and Dispose of the “Charity of all such Your Majesty’s good Subjects, as will contribute to this good Work, to “make Purchases, to Implead, and be Impleaded, “and to hold Courts and Consultations concerning the foresaid Purposes, and granting “them such other Liberties and Privileges, as “may be requisite for the better carrying on the “said pious and charitable Designs. And may “it please Your Majesty, to give such further “Help and Encouragement, to the carrying on so “expensive

“ expensive an Undertaking, as according to Your “ great Wisdom, and most exemplary Piety and “ Charity, Your Majesty may think fit.

And we Your Majesty's most Loyal and most Dutiful Subjects, as in Duty bound, shall ever pray.

The Subject Matter of the Petition was recommended to the Queen by the Arch-Bishop of York, and the Duke of Ormond. And Her Majesty being entirely disposed to countenance and encourage so Religious a Design, received it very graciously, and order'd the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland to make a Report of it. In this Juncture, many Objections were made to the Memorial and Petition; and it was suggested by several Persons of Ireland, to some of High Station here, that the Methods therein proposed for setting forward the Conversion of the Irish, were contrary to Law, destructive of the English Interest, and inconsistent with the Jurisdiction of Bishops, and the Authority of Synods and Convocations. And although these Objections were wholly grounded upon a wrong View, that was taken of the Memorial, and had not any Foundation in Scripture, Law, or Reason; yet it was thought expedient, that any further Progress in this Affair should be deferred, until the Sense and Judgment of the Convocation about it should be known; and likewise until Trial should be made, whether the Parliament wou'd Countenance and Encourage it.

While these Endeavours were used in England, to promote the Conversion of the Irish, the Lord Archbishop of Armagh, and his Clergy, joined in a Subscription, for maintaining two Missionaries to preach in Irish to the Natives in the Diocese of Armagh. The Lord Bishop of Derry, and his Clergy, did the same for the Diocese of Derry; where their Missionaries, as I have been told, have succeeded in gaining some Profelytes to our Church, and in bringing many more into a good liking of our Service. But I have no certain Account, what Progress the former have made in this Work.

As

As soon as the Convocation met, the Lower-House entered upon Consideration of this Affair; and although the End proposed, viz. The Conversion of the Irish, was highly approved of by every one; yet the Opinions about the Means of attaining it, were very various and different; which occasioned great Delay, infomuch that the Time, for making Application to the Parliament, for a Fund to carry on the Work, being almost spent; the Right Honourable Charles o Neile Esquire, a worthy Member of the House of Commons, at the Request of a Well-wisher to the Design, moved, That the Conversion of the Irish should be taken into their Consideration. Upon which, a Committee was immediately appointed, nemine contradicente, to consider of this Matter, and to make a Report of it to the House. When the Report was made, the Honourable House of Commons shewed so zealous a Disposition to do what might be expected from them, towards promoting and encouraging the Conversion of the Irish, that I should fail in paying that Respect which is justly due to them, if I should neglect here to insert the Pious and Charitable Resolutions, which they came to in this Matter, and which are as follow.

“ Mr. O Neile reported from the Committee, “ appointed to consider of proper Methods for “ Converting the Popish Natives of this Kingdom “ to the Established Church, That they had come “ to several Resolutions in the Matter to them re“ ferred, which he read in his Place, and after “ delivered at the Table, where the same were “ again read, and several of them were dis“ agreed to, and several others were agreed to “ by the House with some Amendments, and “ those agreed to are as follow.

" Resolved, That it is the Opinion of this Com" mittee, That the Conversion of the Popish Na" tives of this Kingdom to the Establish'd Re" ligion, is a Work so pious and charitable, and " tending so much to promote the Publick Wel" fare of this Kingdom, that it is worthy of the " Countenance and Encouragement of this House, Resolved, " That it is the Opinion of this " Committee, That in Order to the Conversion " of the Popish Natives of this Kingdom, to the " Establish'd Religion, it will be requisite that " a competent Number of Ministers duly quali" fied to instruct them, and perform the Offices
 " of Religion to them in their own Language,
 " be provided and encouraged by a suitable Main" tenance.

Resolved, That it is the Opinion of this Com" mittee, That a sufficient Number of Charity-" Schools be erected, for the Instruction of the " Popish Children gratis, in the English Tongue,
 " and the Establish'd Religion.

Resolved, " That it is the Opinion of this Com" mittee, That the House be moved, that Heads
 " of a Bill be brought in, to promote and en" courage the Conversion of the Popish Natives
 " of this Kingdom.

Order'd, That Leave be given to bring in Heads
 " of a Bill on the said Resolutions, and that it " be referred to the same Committee, to prepare " and bring in the same.

" Mr. O Neil reported also, That the said Com" mittee had come to a further Resolution, viz.

" Resolv'd, That it is the Opinion of this Commit" tee, That the Reverend John Richardson, Clerk,
 " having taken great Pains in Converting the Po" pish Natives of this Kingdom, That the House

“ be moved to address his Grace the Lord Lieutenant, to recommend the said Mr. Richardson to Her Majesty, to have 200 l. for his Zeal and Service therein.

To which Resolution, the Question being put, the House did agree.

“ Ordered; That such Members of this House as are of Her Majesty's most Honourable Privy-Council, do attend his Grace the Lord Lieutenant with the said Resolution, and desire his Grace would be pleased to lay the same before Her Majesty, as the Resolution of this House.

Pursuant to the Order of the House of Commons, a Bill was prepared; and as it was brought to the Door of the House, the Parliament was adjourned, and the Bills passed before, were soon after transmitted to England; so that no more could be done to any purpose in that Affair by the Parliament, during that Session.

The House of Commons having given such Demonstration of their Readiness to countenance and set forward this good Work; the annexed Proposal for the Conversion of the Irish, with the Reasons upon which it is grounded, and an Answer to the Objections made to it, was published, and Dedicated to both Houses of Convocation. And the Lower-House (after a long and full Consideration of the several Methods proposed for the Conversion of the Irish) agreed upon the following Resolutions, which contain such excellent Rules and Methods for accomplishing this good End, that I can by no means do the Learned and Reverend Members of it greater Justice, than by relating them in their own Words.

Sessio 242. Die Jovis, viz. 25^{to} die Mensis 8bus 1711.

Ordered,

“ TH A T the Reverend Archdeacon Parnell, “ Chairman of the Committee, to whom “ the Preface to the Resolutions agreed to last “ Session, concerning proper Methods for Con“ version of Recusants, &c. was recommitteed, do “ make his Report in his Place; which accordingly “ he did, and delivered the same at the Table, “ and the same being again publicly read.

“ Ordered, That the said Report be immedi“ ately taken into Consideration by this House; “ and the said Report being fully debated, it was “ agreed to with some Amendments.

Ordered, “ That the said Preface be added to the “ Resolutions agreed to last Sessions, as followeth.

Methods for Converting the Papists of Ireland to the Established Church.

“ W Hereas the Conversion of the Natives, is a “ Work that requires the Labour of more “ Clergymen, than can be supported by the present “ Revenues of the Church, the Union of several “ Parishes being, by reason of the great Number “ of Impropropriations, necessary to make up a com“ petent Support for one Clergyman: And where“ as the carrying on of this good Work, requires “ Persons of more Skill in the Irish Language than “ the Generality of the Parochial Clergy are Ma“ sters of: It is therefore Resolved, That Appli“ cation be made for a Fund, for the Education “ of

“ of Natives in the University of Dublin, and “ for the Support and Maintenance of a Sufficient “ Number of grave and duly qualified Persons “ in Holy Orders, to be provided and appointed “ by the several Arch-Bishops and Bishops of “ this Kingdom, in their respective Dioceses, “ with the Approbation and Consent of each respective “ Incumbent of the Parish where they “ are to officiate, to assist the Parochial Clergy, “ where a considerable Number of the Parishioners “ do not understand English, in all such Things “ as shall be judged necessary to promote the Conversion “ of the Popish Natives; and in such Manner, “ and under such Rules and Restrictions, as “ by a Canon to be framed for that purpose shall “ be appointed.

“ And the better to enable the several Incumbents, “ as well as such their Assistants, to perform every thing “ necessary to so pious an Undertaking; that a sufficient “ Number of Bibles and Common-Prayer-Books be provided “ at the publick Charge, in the Irish Language, and a proportionable “ Number of the same be left in the Hands of the several “ Arch-Bishops and Bishops, to be distributed, as need shall “ require, to the several Incumbents and their Assistants.

“ And since it may be justly feared, that notwithstanding “ our best Endeavours, great Numbers of the Popish Natives “ may continue obstinate: And whereas by the good and “ wholesome Laws and Statutes of this Realm, it is not only “ provided, that there be no Succession of Popish Priests, “ but also all Persons of the Communion of the Church of “ Rome, are for ever made incapable of Teaching in any “ School, or being Tutors in private Families, whereby great “ Ignorance

“ norance of Moral and Christian Duties must en“ sue among the Popish Natives in the succeeding “ Generations, if due Care be not taken to pre“ vent it.

Resolved, “ That it will be necessary, that be“ side the Schools already provided by Law, such “ other School or Schools as the Bishop and Mi“ nister shall judge convenient, be appointed in “ every Parochial Cure or Union of this Kingdom, “ where the Children of such Natives may be “ taught gratis. to speak and read the English “ Language, and be instructed in the Principles “ of the Christian Religion: And for the Support “ of such Schools, that the Sum of “ Pounds, be yearly allowed to every such School-“ Master, to be nominated by the Minister, and “ licensed by the Bishop of the Diocese, and be “ obliged to such Rules as by a Canon framed “ for that purpose shall be appointed.

“ And to the End, that the charitable Design “ of such Schools may not be defeated by the Ob“ stinacy of Popish Recusants, and that in Time
 “ the Irish Language may be utterly abolished.
 “ Resolved, That all Popish Natives of this King“ dom, who are not possessed of some real or “ personal Estate, to the Value of 50 l. or who “ do not hold by Lease, Lands to the Value of “ 10 l. per Ann. Rent, be obliged, during Four “ Months of every Year, to send their Children, “ after they have attained to the Age of Seven “ Years, till they arrive at the Age of Twelve “ Years, to such publick Schools, to be taught “ and instructed as aforesaid, under the Penalty “ of per Month, to be levied by “ Warrant from a Justice of Peace, and paid to “ the Minister and Church-wardens of the respe“ ctive

“ Five Parishes, to be disposed of by them as they “ shall think fit, for the better Encouragement of “ the said Schools.

“ Likewise, That all Masters of the Schools “ aforesaid, be obliged to attend the Minister “ of the Parish, four times in the Year, at such “ Times and Places as the Minister shall appoint “ within the said Parish, with the Children com“ mitted to his Care, to be publickly examined “ in the Church Catechism, and the English Lan“ guage; at which times such Children as have “ been already educated in the said Schools, shall “ also attend, till they have passed the Age of “ Sixteen, if they continue in the Parish. That “ also this Method of instructing the Children “ of Popish Recusants may be render'd general; “ Resolved, That all Popish Inhabitants of this “ Kingdom, who are not comprized in the above “ Resolve, shall be obliged, during six Months of “ every Year, to send their Children, after they “ have attained to the Age of seven Years, till “ they arrive at the Age of twelve Years, to some “ Protestant School, under the Penalty of the Sum “ of on the refractory Person, to be “ levied by Warrant from a Justice of Peace, and “ paid to the Ministers and Church-wardens of “ the respective Parishes, to be disposed of by “ them, as they shall think fit, for the Encou“ ragement of the publick Schools abovemention“ tioned. And that it may not be in the Power “ of any Popish Recusants, to elude the Force of “ the said Law, that every Popish Recusant of “ this Kingdom, be obliged, in ten Days after “ the Baptizing of any Child or Children born “ to him, or in his House, to signify the Name “ or Names of such Child or Children, and the “ Name

" Name of the Person who Baptized such Child or " Children, to the Curate of the Parish, to be regi-
 " stred in the Parish-Book. And whoever neglects " or refuses so to do, to forfeit the Sum of " Shillings, to be levied in the manner aforemen" tioned, and distributed by the Minister and " Church-wardens, to the Uses and in the manner
 " aforesaid.

" And for a further Encouragement of the said
 " Charity-Schools, and such Persons as shall be " educated therein, Resolved, That Application
 " be made to Her Majesty, to impower the same
 " Corporation which She shall by Her Royal " Charter appoint, to collect and apply the First-" Fruits for buying in of Improvements, and pur" chasing Glebes; to receive such Bequests, Con" tributions and Legacies as well-disposed Persons " shall give for the Use of the said Schools, or
 " for binding the Children educated therein Ap" prentices in such Protestant Families as profess
 " the Religion of the Church of Ireland, and to " such Trades as they shall think fit.

" And whereas, by the Blessing of Almighty " God upon Her Majesty's pious Disposition and " Care for promoting the true Christian Religion
 " in this Kingdom, and the zealous Endeavours
 " of the Parochial Clergy, and their Assistants,
 " there is great Reason to hope, that considerable " Numbers of Popish Natives may be daily added " to the Church of Ireland; whereby, for the ne" cessary Discharge of the several Ministerial Of" fices, the Number of the Resident Clergy must " be considerably encreased, or the Service of God
 " not duly performed:

Resolved, " That the aforementioned Corpo" ration be further impowered to receive Bequests, " Contri-

Contributions, and Legacies, for the Augmenttion of the Fund for buying in Improvements and Glebes; and that Her Majesty and the Parliament be applied to, to make some other Addition to the same, to render it more equal to the Uses it is intended for: And lastly, if it shall happen that in any Place where it shall be found necessary to establish a new Cure, upon the coming in of the Popish Natives, the Impropria-tor of any Impropration where such Cure is to be founded, cannot be prevailed with to sell his Interest therein, that the said Corporation be further empowered to appoint some competent Sallary for the Support thereof, out of the said Fund, until it can be otherwise provided for.

The Heads of a Canon agreed to this Session, Intituled, Heads of a Canon to be framed for Regulating the Assistants in the Conversion of the Irish.

Resolved,

THAT no Person shall be admitted as an Assistant in any Parish or Diocese of this Kingdom, for the Conversion of Popish Recu-sants, except he be licensed thereunto by the Bishop, and have first qualified himself in such Manner as by the Laws of this Realm is required of all those who are to be admitted to any Cure of Souls. Neither shall any Person be permitted to be as a Missionary at large, to preach when and where he judges meet; but to every Assistant as aforesaid, the Bishop shall, with the Consent of the Clergy, assign a certain District

" strict, within which he shall reside, and the Clergy
 " of the said District shall meet and confer to" gether, and appoint such Time and Places for " the Residence of the said Assistant within their " District, as they shall judge most convenient,
 " and no Person who will not submit to such Ap" pointment shall be admitted.

" And every such Assistant, during the Time
 " of his Residence in any Parish of the said Di" strict, shall be deemed and reputed the Assist" ant or Curate of the Incumbent of the Parish,
 " and shall neither as to Time or Place, preach
 " without the Consent of the said Incumbent;
 " and if he offend herein, he shall be suspended,
 " and not re-admitted till he submits.

" And if any such Assistant behaves himself fa" ctiously, or disorderly, in any Parish, or secretly
 " promotes, or openly carries on any Faction a" gainst the Incumbent thereof, upon due Proof
 " made before the Bishop, he shall be suspended,
 " and not admitted, but at the Request of the Cler" gy of the said District.

" And if any such licensed Assistant shall publish " or teach any Heretical or Schismatical Doctrine,
 " or shall endeavour to set up any separate Con-" venticle, in Opposition to the Minister of the " Parish, he shall be suspended; and if he do not " repent, and publickly revoke his Error, he shall " be degraded from Holy Orders.

" And every such Assistant shall go from House
 " to House, and visit and confer with the Popish
 " Recusants, and catechize, or otherwise instruct " them, as shall be judged most convenient at such " Times and Places, and in such Manner as shall " be appointed by the Incumbent; and if he re" fuses so to do, let him be suspended.

" That they shall make a List of the Popish In-

May

May it please Your Graces and Lordships,

“ I am commanded by the Lower-House of “ Convocation, to acquaint Your Graces and Lord“ ships, That they have taken into their Conside“ ration, that Head of Her Majesty's Licence, “ which relates to the Conversion of the Papists “ of Ireland, and that they have come to several “ Resolutions, which they have commanded me “ to lay before Your Graces and Lordships, for “ Your Concurrence.

Whereupon the Prolocutor, with his Assessors, went to the Upper House, and soon returning, signified, “ That in Obedience to the Commands “ of this House, he waited on the Lords of the “ Upper-House, and laid the said Papers and “ Message before them.

Thus I have given the best Account that I could, in so short a Time, of this Affair: And now, after all, if any one will look back with an impartial Eye, and consider the Endeavours that have been used to convert the Irish, it will be obvious and natural to make this Observation upon the whole, That the principal Cause, in all probability, why the Reformed Religion hath all this Time made no greater Progress among the Natives of Ireland, is, that the most fit and effectual, or (to speak in other Terms) the evangelical Means, have not been universally and steadily used to that End: There hath not due Care been taken, to perform the Offices of Religion to them constantly in their own Language. It must be acknowledged indeed, that other Causes have concurred, to keep up Popery in that Kingdom; but the first

and greatest is, That the Light of God's Word (which converteth the Soul, Psal. 19. 7) hath not been sufficiently communicated to them. Politick Methods have been depended upon, for accomplishing this Work, and the Means of the Gospel have been neglected : As if we knew better than Christ and his Apostles, how Religion is to be propagated in the World : Or the Methods used by them were not seasonable or convenient now.

And that this Omission is the chief Reason, why the Popish Religion continues to have still so many Votaries in Ireland, may be presumed, from the greater Progress which the Reformed Religion hath made in Great Britain, upon Application made to the People in their own Language. The Inhabitants of Wales are generally Protestants; and the Reason is, because they are instructed, and have Religious Offices performed in Welsh, pursuant to an excellent Law now in force in this Kingdom.

There was great Care taken, both in the Times of Episcopacy and Presbytery, that the Highlanders should have the Ordinances of Religion administered to them in their Language. And the good Effect of this, is, that they have for the most part embraced the Protestant Religion.

By the same Means, the Christian Religion hath begun of late to spread apace in the East and West-Indies. The Word of God (which is quick and powerful, and which, under the Spirit of God, is the chief Instrument of Conversion) hath been printed in the Indian Tongues, and distributed among the Natives; whereby many of them have been turned from Darkness to Light, and from the Power of Satan unto God. This appears from the following Letter, which I received from the worthy Gentleman, who is present Agent for New-England.

To the Reverend Mr. John Richardson.

 “ parted to me your Design of Reprint“ ing the Irish Bible and Liturgy, for the Bene“ fit of the poor Irish, who han’t the Knowledge

 “ with some Opposition therein, were desirous to “ know what Success the Translation of the Bible

 “ an Natives of America.

“ I have considered of your Question, and do “ Indians thereby arriv’d to such a Competency “ of Christian Knowledge, that their Ministers “ were able to preach profitably, and their Peo“ ple to understand and prize the Doctrine of the “ Gospel. The Corporation for Propagating the “ Gospel in those Parts, are so sensible of this,

 “ pressions of the Indian Bible already, they are “ preparing a Third, and it is now in the Press “ sper you in this, &c.

CONVERSION
Establish'd Religion.

WHEREAS several Laws have been lately made in the Kingdom of Ireland, to weaken and discourage the Popish Interest therein, and particularly to extinguish the Succession of the Popish Clergy; whereby their Number is already sensibly decreased, and in some Counties the whole Order will probably fail within a few Years.

Years. And it is therefore hoped, that by the Divine Blessing, those Means may prove successful for attaining the good Ends for which they were intended, if they be seconded with proper and effectual Methods of Instructing the Irish, and reclaiming them from their Errors.

And whereas the Conversion of the Natives of Ireland to the Establish'd Church, is a Work, which besides the great and many Benefits, both Spiritual and Temporal, that must thereby accrue to themselves, would also bring a considerable Addition to the Strength of Her Majesty's Dominions; and would tend very much, to promote and preserve the Security and Tranquillity, and to augment the Wealth and Improvement of them.

And whereas, the Want of the necessary Means of Propagating the Establish'd Religion among the Natives of Ireland, is a great Hindrance of their Conversion, and hath given Popish Priests and Jesuits great Advantage of keeping them in their Errors and Superstitions, and a blind Obedience to the foreign Jurisdiction of the Church of Rome. And the said Priests and Jesuits have taken thence Opportunity of corrupting them with Principles, and exciting them to Practices of dangerous Consequence to Her Majesty's Sacred Person and Government, and to

to the Protestant Succession, as by Law establish'd. It is humbly Proposed,

I. That a competent Number of Ministers, duly qualify'd to instruct the Natives, and to perform the Offices of Religion to them in their own Language, be provided and encouraged by a suitable Maintenance, to be sent among them.

II. That the Approbation and Admission of each of these Ministers be in the Bishop of the Diocese; and that they shall officiate in such Places and under such Rules as the Bishop shall appoint; and shall in all Respects be subject to the Jurisdiction of the Bishop, as the other Clergy are.

III. That the Bible, Common-Prayer-Book, and an Exposition of the Church Catechism, be Printed in Irish, for the Administration of the Ordinances of Religion to them in their own Tongue.

IV. That a sufficient Number of Charity-Schools be Erected, for the Instruction of the Irish Children, gratis, in the English Tongue, and the Establish'd Religion; and that some proper Encouragement be given to Irish Children Educated in those Schools, the Benefit of which Schools may be extended to the Children of Poor Protestants.

V. That the Honourable House of Commons would be pleased to grant a Fund for the carrying on so pious and charitable a Design.

VI. In

VI. In regard that this Work will be attended with great Charge and Expence, and will probably meet with many Difficulties and Obstructions which cannot be easily foreseen; and that the Money so granted may be apply'd to the Uses and Purposes for which it is given, and no other: It is humbly Propos'd, That Application be made to the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, That a Society be appointed and Impower'd by Royal Charter, to receive voluntary Contributions and Legacies, and to make Purchases to be apply'd to the Uses aforementioned; And also Authoriz'd and Intrusted to Receive, Manage, and Dispose of such Sum or Sums of Money, as may be granted by Parliament, in such manner as by Law shall be appointed. And, whereas Her Majesty hath been graciously pleas'd to Impower the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, to Constitute, by Letters Patent, Commissioners for applying the First-Fruits of that Kingdom, to the Buying in of Improvements. Lastly, It is humbly Propos'd, That Application be made to Her Majesty, To Erect, Constitute, and Appoint One and the same Society for Both the aforementioned Purposes, relating to the Conversion of the Irish, and Buying in of Improvements.

THE CONVERSION OF THE NATIVES.

WHEN a Design is set on Foot, to Convert a Nation to the True Religion, one would think that the ordinary Gospel-means are the fittest and most unexceptionable; therefore, to prevent all just Cause of Exception about so useful and necessary an Undertaking, the Scheme here propos'd for the Conversion of the Popish Natives, was fram'd according to that Excellent Pattern which our Blessed Saviour and his Apostles have left us. But notwithstanding this, many Objections have been made to it, especially to the 1st, 3^d, 4th, and 6th Articles: I shall therefore, with all Deference and Submission to better Understandings, endeavour to shew the Reasons upon which the said Articles are grounded; and then give a plain and short Answer to the Objections made to them.

As to the First and Third Articles, which depend the one upon the other, they are founded upon the Word of God, and the Nature of the Thing : To make this appear, I desire that these two following Propositions may be taken for granted, because they can be proved beyond Denial.

First, That there are great Numbers of the Natives of Ireland, who cannot speak English at all : And that of those who can speak English, so far as relates to the common and ordinary Concerns of Life, there are not a few, who do not understand it so well, as to reap any Benefit from our Prayers and Sermons in English.

Secondly, That the Doctrines and Practices of the Romanists are so very corrupt, that they are of dangerous Consequence to their Souls, and do very much hazard their Salvation.

Now the Case being so with them, all Christians are obliged, according to their several Abilities and Circumstances, to use their Endeavours to recover them from the miserable and dangerous Condition wherein they are, that they may be converted from the Error of their way, and brought to an Acknowledgment of the Truth. For all Christians in general do pray, or at least ought to pray daily, that Christ's Kingdom may come ; that is, that his Gospel may be received in its Purity by all Persons : That God's Ways may be known upon Earth, and his saving Health among all Nations. “ Now if they be sincere “ in their Prayers, they must do their Parts “ for obtaining these Things ; it being a known “ Rule in Divinity, that we ought to use our utmost Endeavours, for the obtaining of that,
 “ for which we are commanded to pray. All Christians are also commanded, as they have Opportunity portunity, to do good unto all Men, Gal. 6. 10. to do Good to their Bodies, and especially to the better Part of them, their Souls, by instructing their ignorant Minds, and removing their Prejudices, and reclaiming them from their Errors, which is to do them Good, that will last for ever. And when they have not personal Opportunities, they are obliged to it according to their Power, by lending and bestowing good Books, by teaching the Poor to read, by encouraging Learning and Religion, and by assisting the Teachers and Professors of them.

And it would seem, that as the Necessity is greater, so the Obligation is stronger, of performing these Duties to the Irish, than the British: Because the more barbarous and ignorant any People are, their Souls are in greater Danger of perishing; and therefore our Endeavours should be more earnest to rescue them from it; according to Christ's Example, who came to seek and save that which is lost, Luke 19. 10. and tells us; That they that be whole need not the Physician, but they that be sick; and that He came not to call the Righteous, but Sinners to Repentance, Mat. 9. 12, 13.

But this Duty of instructing the Ignorant, and reclaiming the Erroneous, is a Duty especially incumbent upon all the Pastors of Christ's Church. We are obliged to propagate the saving Truths of Religion among all Men, to the best of our Power and Ability, by the very Words, and the main Tenour of that Commission from which we derive our Office, Matth. 28. 19, 20. Go ye therefore and teach all Nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all Things whatsoever I have commanded you: And lo! I am with you always,

always, even unto the End of the World, Amen. i. e. Endeavour to disciple all Nations, or to make all the World true Christians, by Baptizing them, and by instructing them, to believe and obey my Gospel; and to encourage you to undertake this, I do give you the Promise of my Presence and Assistance to the End of the World.

Our Saviour knew full well, that it was not possible for his Apostles, in their own Persons, to do all this. He must therefore be understood, to design that their Office should continue by a Succession from them to the End of the World; and in Consequence of this, to expect and require, that this great Work should be carried on by their Successors in all Ages: So that we who are appointed to succeed the Apostles in their Office, (some with a larger, and others with a less Share of their Power) are obliged, by Virtue of it, to finish and perfect what remains to be done of this Matter, as far as we can.

This farther appears from the Promise which our Saviour annexes to the Discharge of this Duty. And lo, I am with you always, even unto the End of the World; as much as if he said, Your Continuance here being to be but short, to hearten and excite you and all others, who shall be concerned in this Office, to go on with this Work, I do assure you, that my Presence and Assistance shall be given unto the End of the World, not only to you, but to your Successors in this Office of Teaching all Nations, or Preaching the Gospel to every Creature. So that as we expect the Blessing of Christ on our selves, as his Ministers, we ought, as much as in us lies, to endeavour to Propagate his Religion among those who sit in Darkness and in the Shadow of Death.

Therefore, since our blessed Saviour doth not except the Irish Nation, when He commands his Apostles,

Apostles, and in them, their Successors, to teach all Nations ; it follows, that it is our indispensable Duty, to use our Endeavours to instruct the Popish Natives of Ireland in the true Religion, and to reclaim them from their Errors.

And if it be so, then we are obliged to do this in their own Language, there being no other way of instructing them in the saving Knowledge of Religion, but by proposing the necessary Truths of it to their Minds, in a Language which they understand.

This also obliges us to publish the Scriptures to them in Irish, that they may come by the Knowledge of God's revealed Will in a known Tongue ; the Reasons for printing the Bible in Irish now, being the same as for publishing it in every Tongue and Language, wherein the Gospel was first preached.

And as our happy Constitution stands, both in Church and State, we are for the same Reason obliged to publish the Common-Prayer-Book in Irish, that the Ordinances of Religion may be administered to them in a known Tongue, according to the Forms therein prescrib'd, and no other.

And considering the Slowness of some Mens Understandings, and that printed Bibles and Common-Prayer-Books cannot be had by every one, it will be very useful, if not necessary, towards the attaining the same End and Design, that some other pious and edifying Treatises of Religion, especially An Exposition of the Church Catechism, be printed in the same Language ; that so the Means of Instruction may be more plentifully offered to them.

This Argument taken from Scripture, for converting the Natives by the Means proposed in the First and Third Articles, is so very plain and evident, that it cannot be opposed without contradicting our Saviour. For our blessed Lord having commanded us to go and teach all Nations without Exception, this Command obliges us to instruct the Natives in Irish, until they understand some other Language; and therefore whatsoever Objections are made to it, mean as much, as that we should not go and teach all Nations, which is an exprefs Contradiction to our Saviour; so that I might pass it by without any further Answer:

94 The Popish Religion, not the Irish Language,

But because some Persons, by taking a wrong View of these Things, have not only been induced to make Objections to them, but also to insist upon them: I shall consider them with all the Clearness and Brevity that I can.

1st, It is Objected, That to print Books in Irish, and to send Missionaries among the Natives, to instruct them in their own Language, is very destructive of the English Interest in Ireland. But I humbly desire that it may be considered.

1. That nothing tends more effectually to preserve the Peace and Tranquillity of Ireland, and to augment the Improvement thereof, and consequently to promote and secure the Interest which the English have therein, than the Conversion of the Irish to the Establish'd Religion, as hereafter will more fully appear.

2. Printing Books in Irish, and sending Missionaries among the Natives, to instruct them, and administer the Ordinances of Religion to them in a Language which they understand, are the necessary Means of converting them; and therefore cannot be destructive of the English Interest; for if the End be good, the necessary Means must be so too.

3. Preaching in the Irish Language is not an Encouragement of the Irish Interest, any more, than preaching in French in England, is an Encouragement of the French Interest: For the Irish Papists, who who can speak English, ever were, and still are as great Enemies to the English Interest, as the Irish Papists who cannot speak English. And I see no Reason why the Welsh Language in England, and the Irish Language in Scotland, should not be as pernicious to the British Interest, as the Irish Language in Ireland: Wherefore it is very evident, that it is the Popish Religion, and not the Irish Language, that is repugnant to the English Interest in Ireland.

4. To administer the Ordinances of Religion to the Irish in their own Language, is indeed the most effectual Way to destroy the Irish Interest in Ireland: For the Interest of the Popish Natives in Ireland, as opposed to the English Interest, is either to extirpate or to subdue the English Nation in that Kingdom, that so they may have their Estates, their Substance, and the whole Kingdom to themselves. Now the proper Method to prevent such a Design, is to convert them to the Protestant Religion; and surely the best, the only way of doing that, is to apply to them in a Language which they understand.

Illy, It is objected, That to print Books in Irish, and to send Missionaries to Preach in that Tongue, is directly against Law, and the Statute of the 28th of Henry the VIIIth; for the English Order, Habit, and Language declares, that those that do so, shall, whatever they may pretend, be deemed as Enemies to the King, and English Interest.

To which I answer.

1. That in the Preamble of this Act (in which there are no particular Penalties mention'd, and in which the King's Will and Pleasure only concerning the Use of the English Order, Habit, and Language is declar'd) it is said indeed, "That 96 Preaching in Irish not contrary to Law.

“ such as do not speak English, or such as return “ to the Irish Language, † shall be deem’d as Enemies to the King and English Interest: But in the Enacting Part, in which the Natives are commanded to use their utmost Endeavour to learn to speak English, and to teach their Children to do so, there is not one Word prohibiting the printing of Books in Irish, or preaching in that Language; It is so far from that, that Archbishops and Bishops, &c. are allow’d to give Collation and Institution to meer Irishmen, where such as speak English cannot be had.

And that this Statute, which was made 1534, or the Beginning of (35.) was always taken in this Sense, appears from hence.

Queen Elizabeth sent a Font of Irish Types to Ireland, in order to have the New Testament and Liturgy printed in that Tongue.

King James the 1st, with the Advice of the Privy-Council, order’d that the Natives should be instructed in their own Language.

Nehemias Donellan, and William Daniel, both Archbishops of Tuam; Nicholas Walsh, Bishop of Offory; and John Kearney, Treasurer of St. Patricks, caused the New-Testament to be translated into Irish: And the Province of Connaught, and Sir William Usher Clerk of the Council, bore the Charge of the Edition, A. D. 1602. which probably they would not have done, when there were so many Papists in the Parliament, and when Popery was so

† Many of the Old English in these Days (being disgusted, on account of the heavy Burthens which the Government laid upon them) entirely forsook the English Interest, intermarried and united with the Irish, and made use wholly of the Irish Customs and Language.

so powerful in that Kingdom, if it had been deem'd to be contrary to Law.

After that, A. D. 1608. the same Archbishop Daniel printed the Common-Prayer in Irish.

Bishop Bedel also printed some small Tracts in Irish, and made the Old Testament to be translated into that Language, before the Rebellion of Forty One.

And in one of the Canons of the Church of Ireland, made by the Convocation which met in Dublin, Anno Domini 1634. every Minister is required to read Part of the Liturgy in Irish, where the half of the Congregation is Irish. From all which we may observe, what Opinion the Province of Connaught, several Archbishops and Bishops before the Great Rebellion, and the Convocation, had of the Statute of the 28th of Henry the VIIIth.

Mr. Boyle printed the whole Bible in 1685, and prefixed a large Preface address'd to his Countrymen; in which, among other Things, there are these remarkable Words, which I shall mention here, as being very apposite to our present purpose.

“ Finally, Students in Schools and Universities, “ who design to live by the Cure of Souls in “ Ireland, shall, upon a serious Consideration, find “ it their precise Duty, to procure such a Know“ ledge of the Language of the Natives, as may “ enable them to help and instruct the Souls com“ mitted to their Charge, and of which they are “ to give an Account to God: For notwithstand“ ing all the wise Statutes and Endeavours used “ to bring this whole Nation to a Knowledge of “ the English Tongue, Experience shews it could “ not be effected; too many being unable to give “ such Teaching to their Children, or get it for “ themselves. And it is apparent, that in Ireland there are many Parishes, Baronies, and whole Counties, in which the Common People do understand no other Language but Irish.

“ This being so, how can it be presumed of any godly Pastor of Souls in such Places, that he will not endeavour to procure the spiritual Welfare of those Men, by the Sweat of whose Brows he hath his Bread, enabling himself to preach and instruct them in the Language which they best understand ; that being the Way to get their Good Will, and gain their Souls to God.

Wherefore if this Statute had ever been taken in such a strict Sense, as some are pleased now to put upon it ; it may be presumed, that it would have long since been repealed, and that an express Law against the Gospel, would not have remain'd so long in our Statute-Book. And whereas, so long as there are any Natives in Ireland, that cannot speak English, if it be taken so strictly, it must oblige them to worship in an unknown Tongue ; it is to all Intents and Purposes repealed or suspended by such Statutes as abolish Popery, and establish the Reformed Religion in Ireland.

And that this is the Opinion of the present Parliament, appears from an Act made by them in the Eighth Year of Her present Majesty's Reign, Intituled, An Act for Explaining and Amending an Act, Intituled, An Act to prevent the further Growth of Popery. In which it is Enacted as followeth, without repealing the said Statute of the 28th of Henry the 8th.

And every such Convert or Converts, i. e. converted Priest or Priests, shall, and he or they are hereby required, under Penalty of forfeiting his or their Allowance or Allowances as aforesaid, publickly to read the Common-

Common-Prayer, or Liturgy of the Church of Ireland, and preach once a Week in the English or Irish Tongue, in such Places and at such Times as the said Archbishops or Bishops shall direct. From which it plainly appears, that preaching in Irish is so far from being contrary to Law, that it is enjoined by an express Act of Parliament.

III^{dly}, To what End should all this be done, since all who can read, can read English, but not One in Five Hundred can read or understand the Irish Character.

I answer, That such Ministers especially as labour among them, may have the necessary Books for instructing them, and administering the Ordinances of Religion to them in a known Tongue; and also that such of the Irish as can read their own Language, may have the Use and Benefit of them. And whereas it is asserted, that the printed Irish differs wholly from what is spoken; whereby it is insinuated, that the common People will not understand Irish Printed Books when read to them: I know the contrary by my own Experience, I have read the Bible and Common-Prayer-Book in Irish to the Common-People, both publickly and privately, and they declared they understood both very well; and that I might be satisfied they did so, I caused some of them to translate several Sentences, which they did exactly; besides, if the Case were so, Care might be taken for the future, to print the Irish as it is spoken.

IV^{thly}, It is objected, That Missionaries ought to be sent to preach in English, rather than in Irish.

But there is no need to send Missionaries to preach to them in English; because all the present Incumbents in Ireland can speak English, and so may confer with their Popish Parishioners that can speak that Language, as often as they please: Whereas there

there is very great and urgent Need of sending Missionaries to preach to them in Irish, because few of the present Incumbents can speak or read Irish; and our Law doth prevent a Succession of the Popish Clergy: So that if we neglect to instruct them in their own Language, our Lord may justly take up the Complaint against us under the Gospel, which he did against the Prophets under the Law, My People are destroyed for lack of Knowledge.

Vthly, It is said, That if the Natives who understand English were converted, the others would soon follow, as being dependent upon them.

But Experience tells us otherwise. Several Irish Noblemen and Gentlemen have embraced the Protestant Religion, whose Dependents and Followers continue still to be Papists: Besides, What Benefit would they reap by such a Conversion as this? What Instruction or Edification would an Irishman, that doth not understand English, get by private Instruction, or the publick Offices in the English Tongue? If he must come into our Assemblies, must he not worship in an unknown Tongue? And might he not say with St. Paul, 1 Cor. 14. 11. If I know not the meaning of the Voice, I shall be unto him that speaketh, a Barbarian, and he that speaketh, shall be a Barbarian unto me?

Vlthly, It is said, That Experience hath informed us, that of all the Converts that have been made, there is not an Instance of one who did not understand English.

God be praised, a considerable Number of the Nobility, Popish Clergy, and Gentry, and Commonality of Ireland, hath been converted to the Protestant Religion; but this is so far from being a real Objection against the Proposal, that it is a very strong Argument for it; because many of the Irish, who can speak English, have been turned from Darkness to Light, by having an happy Opportunity of the true and proper Means of Conversion, viz. by being address'd to, and having the Offices of Religion perform'd to them, in a Tongue which they understand. And I would not have any one believe, that the Irish, who cannot speak English, are so untractable, and obstinate, that there is no hope of Converting them; for I have heard a whole Congregation of them express great Satisfaction, upon hearing Divine Service in their own Tongue, and thank the Protestant Minister who officiated to them. And that considerable Numbers of Irish who cannot speak English, have been converted, where due Care hath been taken of them, doth evidently appear from the two following Letters.

Reverend Sir,

“ I N relation to what we were talking of the “ other Day, concerning the Necessity and “ Usefulness of Preaching to the Irish in their “ own Language; I think there can nothing be “ a more evident Instance of it, than what I am “ now going to tell you from my own certain “ Knowledge. Soon after the late War in Ire- “ land, when a great Part of the Country was “ waste and uninhabited, several Families, who “ could neither speak nor understand any Lan“ guage but Irish, found their Account in coming “ from the Western Isles of Scotland, and settling “ in the Northern Parts of the County of An- “ trim. Upon their first Coming, they generally “ joined themselves to the Established Church of “ Ireland, but in a little time fell off to the Church “ of Rome; and when they were asked the Rea“ son son of their Change, they could give no other than because they understood the Irish Priests; and though they did not like their Religion, yet they thought it better to be of that, than be of no Religion at all. About Eight or Nine Years ago, a Clergyman dying who held two Vicarages in that Part of the Country, which are called Ramoan and Culefaghtrein; the Inhabitants of the latter petitioned the Bishop of the Diocese to have a Minister who could preach to them in Irish, and recommended one Mr.

Duncan Mac Arthur, a Highland Gentleman, who had served the Cure during the late Incumbent's Sickness; which Petition the Bishop thought so reasonable, though irregular, that he gave that Parish to Mr. Mac Arthur, and Ra- moan to me. But upon my going abroad, soon after Mr. Mac Arthur had the Care of both the Parishes, and preached every Sunday Afternoon in Irish, to the great Satisfaction of the Parishioners. What Progress he made in the Conversion of the Irish, I can't tell, having been out of the Kingdom during the remaining part of his Life; but upon his Death, one Mr. Ar- chibald Mac Collum having been employed by the Bishop to take Care of those Parishes, has taken such effectual Pains with the Irish and Highlanders of them, that by the Blessing of God, he has not only brought back Numbers who had fallen off from our Church to that of Rome, but brought over several who were originally Irish Papists, and is every Day gaining upon them. And as there are Numbers of these Irish and Highlanders, who understand no English at all, insomuch, that I have been often obliged to make use of an Interpreter when “ I talked to them ; so even those who do under“ stand it so well, as to converse with their Neigh“ bours about the Common Concerns of Life, de“ clare they are not capable of understanding so “ well, nor receiving that Benefit from a Sermon “ in English, which they do from one in Irish ; of “ which the Bishop of the Diocese is so well ap-“ prized, that he takes Care to provide, not on“ ly those I have mentioned, but several other “ Parishes in the Neighbourhood, who are in the “ same Circumstances, with Clergymen, who can “ preach to the People in the Irish Language.

“ I might add several other Things, which I “ have by Hear-say, to strengthen what I have “ told you of the Necessity of Preaching to the “ Irish in their own Language ; as particularly, “ that there is one Stewart, a Dissenting Teacher “ in a Neighbouring Parish, who, by preaching “ in Irish, has brought over a considerable Num“ ber of Irish to be his Hearers : This I am sure “ of, that there is such a Man placed there, and “ supported by a Relation of mine ; but not be“ ing certain what Progress he has made, I don’t “ insist upon it, being resolved to assert nothing “ but what I am very sure of, and what shall at “ any time be made out beyond Possibility of Con“ tradiction, by the Subscriptions of the Ministers “ and chief Parishioners of those Parishes, and by “ Certificates from the Bishop and Neighbouring “ Clergymen of that Diocese, if there be any “ Necessity of more authentick Testimonies to the “ Truth of this Matter, than what can be gi“ ven it by,

Reverend SIR,

Your most Obedient Servant,

S I R,

AS to what we discoursed at parting, the Shortness of my Time did not give me leave to acquaint you, that I had been some Years ago employed by the Trustees for Sale of the forfeited Estates in Ireland, on the Survey of these Forfeitures, particularly in the County of Antrim, where I met many of the Inhabitants, especially of the Baronies of Glenarm, Dunluce and Killconaway, who could not speak the English Tongue; and asking them in Irish, what Religion they profess'd, they answered they were Presbyterians; upon which I asked them further, how they could understand their Minister Preaching; to that they answer'd, he always preach'd in Irish. I had the Curiosity to go to their Meeting on the Sunday following, where I heard their Minister (whose Name I cannot remember) preach to them in Irish, at which (though I think he did not do it well) they expressed great Devotion: His Audience (as I understood) was compos'd of Native Irish and Highlanders. This, if it does you any Service to promote so good an Undertaking, I am able, and shall be always ready to testify; as also that I am,

Reverend S I R,

Your most Obedient Servant,

J. MAGUIRE.

VIIIthly, It is objected, That keeping up a Difference in Language, will keep up a Difference in Religion; so that by Preaching in Irish, we shall rather confirm the Natives in Popery, than convert them to the Protestant Religion.

I answer, that the different manner of Communicating our Thoughts of any Thing to others, doth neither alter the Nature of the Thing, nor our Thoughts and Notions of it: Otherwise, different Languages would be the Causes of Mens having different Conceptions of other Things, as well as of Religion; whereas, altho' there be great Variety of Languages in the World, yet we have Reason to believe, that all Men agree in their Apprehensions and Conceptions of many Things; and on the other side we find, that Men speaking the same Language, have different Thoughts of the same Thing. Wherefore since a Language hath no Operation upon the Nature of a Thing, or of our Notions and Apprehensions of it, it plainly follows, that Diversity of Religion in the World doth not proceed from the different Way of speaking which Men use, (for then God would have brought a great Multitude of Religions into the World, by the Multiplication of Languages at Babel) but from their different Educations, Tempers, and Constitutions, or from the various Abilities and Capacities of their Minds, or sometimes from their different Views and Interests.

2. If Difference in Language keeps up Difference in Religion, our blessed Saviour (who hath enjoined Unity of Religion as earnestly, and as frequently as any other Duty) would not have commanded, and by his Holy Spirit impowered, the Apostles to preach the Gospel in different Languages: He would have abolished all Languages but one, otherwise, otherwise, if this Objection holds good, his Command of Unity in Religion had been impracticable.

3. This Objection is sufficiently confuted by the Experience of all Ages. But to go no higher than the Christian Ara. We find, that although the Primitive Christians spoke different Languages, yet they were very unanimous in their Religion, Acts 2. 44, 45, 46. All that believed were together, and had all Things common, and sold their Possessions and Goods, and parted them to all Men, as every Man had need. And they continuing daily with one accord in the Temple, and breaking Bread from House to House, did eat their Meat with Gladness and Singleness of Heart. I might quote many Instances among the Mahometan, Popish and Protestant Countries on the Continent, to prove that different Languages do not produce different Religions: But I shall content my self, and I believe every impartial Reader will also be fully contented with Three or Four in Great Britain and Ireland. The English, Welsh, and Cornish Tongues in England do not produce Diversity of Religion, among the People who speak them. So in Scotland, the Highlanders and Saxons are for the most part of the same Religion, notwithstanding that their Speech is not the same. On the other hand, Agreement in Language, doth not prevent Diversity of Religion: How many Sectaries are there in these Kingdoms who speak no other Language but the English? Have we not English Papists, and Irish Protestants, Irish Papists and English Protestants?

From what hath been said to this Objection, it appears, that the Conclusion drawn from these Premises is very inconclusive, viz. That by preach- ing in Irish, we shall rather confirm the Natives in Popery, than convert them to the Protestant Religion; which is as if one should say, by letting in the Light to a Man who is in the dark, you shall rather keep him still in the dark, than give him an Opportunity of seeing: That by Preaching the Truth to a Man, you shall confirm him in his Errors: That by praying in a known Tongue, you shall induce him to go on in praying in an unknown Tongue; and that, by worshiping GOD alone, you shall keep him upon his Knees to the Virgin Mary, or some other Saint or Angel.

Besides, if by preaching in Irish, you shall rather confirm an Irishman in Popery, than convert him to the Protestant Religion, it necessarily follows, that it is impossible to convert an Irishman; because if you cannot do it by conveying the Truth and Light of the Gospel to him, by the means of a Language which he doth understand, you cannot do it by means of a Language which he doth not understand: But Experience shews, that an Irishman may be converted by preaching in Irish, instead of being confirmed in Popery; which is another Instance of the Invalidity of this Objection.

IX. If it should be objected, That these Missionaries may at pleasure preach to the Irish, Popery, Fanaticism, or Sedition it self.

I answer, That, by the excellent Constitution of our Church, the Bishops have not only a Power given to satisfy themselves, but also have an Opportunity to give the People all the Satisfaction that can be expected, of the Soundness and Orthodoxy of their Ministers, when they are ordain'd, or admitted to any Cure.

For, 1st, at Ordination every Minister solemnly vows to preach sound Doctrine to the People.

2. In the 32d Canon of our Church, it is order'd That no Person shall be receiv'd into the Ministry or admitted to any Ecclesiastical Living, nor permitted to preach, read, lecture, catechize, or minister the Sacraments, except he shall first, by Subscription, declare his Consent to the first Four Canons of our Church; in the first of which, he declares his Approbation of the Thirty Nine Articles; and in the Third, his Assent to the Liturgy of our Church. 3. Our Liturgy (to the Use of which, every Minister is confined in the publick Worship of GOD,) is also a very effectual Means to prevent the Minister from corrupting the People with Heresy: For he is obliged to make a Confession of his Faith, in Conjunction with the People, according to those Forms of sound Words set down in the CREEDS, commonly called, the Apostolical, Nicene, and Athanasian; so that he cannot preach or spread any Tenet contrary to any of these fundamental Articles of Faith, without renouncing his Creed, whereof he constantly makes a Profession at every publick Worship of GOD. In the Liturgy also, not only the fundamental Articles of Faith; but also the necessary Points of Practice, and many useful and edifying Truths are mention'd; by which Means, the People have the Advantage of being instructed in them, and the Minister also is bound up from varying from them. 4. It is enacted in our Law, that severe Penalties shall be inflicted upon any Minister, who shall teach or maintain any Thing contrary to the Form of sound Doctrine contained in our Liturgy and Articles.

I do not see how better Rules could have been made, or more effectual Methods used, to keep the Clergy within the Bounds of the Christian Faith, Faith, and to preserve the Doctrine of the Gospel pure and uncorrupted in the Church of Christ; and the Missionaries being subject to these Rules and Methods, and being accountable to the respective Bishops for departing from them, as well as any other Clergymen, I do not understand how they may, at their Pleasure, preach Popery, Fanaticism, or Sedition.

X. It is said, That to print Books in Irish, and to send Missionaries to preach in that Tongue, is to give too much Encouragement to the Language.

But this being the only Way to convert such of the Natives, as do not understand English, we are indispensably bound to make this Use of the Language, out of Charity to their Souls, and in Obedience to our Saviour's express Command. And altho' I should not be for encouraging the Language any farther, than is necessary to promote the Conversion of the Irish, and the Salvation of their Souls; yet, it being evident, that Difference of Language doth not keep up Difference of Religion; and that it is not the Irish Language, but the Popish Religion, that is repugnant to the English Interest, I cannot perceive any Harm, even in Point of Policy, in using it. For Diversity of Languages is not hurtful in other Countries; nay, the Irish Language it self, is a harmless Thing in Scotland, and hath not any Marks of the Beast upon it.

And after all, I do not question, but to make this Use of the Language at present, is the most effectual Way to diminish the Use of it hereafter: For, if we prevail with them to conform to our Church, their Prejudices being thereby in a great Measure removed, they will more readily fall in with our Customs and Language; and, being qualified equally with our selves for any Office

110 Abolition of the Irish Language consider'd, or Employment, their Interest will soon induce them to speak English.

XI. It is objected, That the best Way to convert the Irish is, to abolish their Language; according to the wise Design of our Ancestors, nigh Two Hundred Years ago.

How wise and practicable a Design this is, we may learn from Experience; for, after the Tryal of near Two Hundred Years, we find little or no Progress made in it. They still retain their Language, and Religion too. Nay, the Irish Tongue is so far from being abolish'd, that it hath spread as much among the British, in Proportion to their Number, as the English Language among the Irish.

But because this Objection is much insisted on, and is the specious Pretence, (to say no more) which hath hitherto stopp'd the Progress of the Reformation in that Kingdom; I hope the Reader will pardon me, if I be somewhat prolix in answering it; being induced thereunto, not upon Account of the Weight and Force, but the Art-fulness and Popularity of it. In order therefore to give all reasonable Satisfaction to such as make this Objection;

1. I will shew the great Difficulties of abolishing a Language.

2. I will enquire into the Practice of the great Monarchs, and of some other Nations, with Relation to this Point.

3. I will make it appear, That such an Attempt would very much delay, if not altogether obstruct their Conversion.

1. As to the great Difficulties of abolishing a Language: When, to defeat the vain and foolish Enterprize at Babel, God was pleased, not only so

to confound the one Language spoken by the Builders, that they could not understand one another's Speech; but also to scatter them abroad from thence, upon the Face of all the Earth: We have Grounds from Scripture to believe, that (as Bishop Patrick observes) "the same common Dialect (or Way of Speaking) was given to those Families, whom God would have to make one Colony in the Dispersion. For they were divided in their Lands; every one after his Tongue, after their Families, in their Nations, Gen. 5. 20, 31. From which it follows, that where different Languages were spoken, the People speaking them were different Nations, separated from one another, by the Dissolution of that common Bond of Society, which consisted in Unity of Language, and forced into a Plurality of Societies, by the Multiplicity of Languages. Which being premised, the Difficulty of abolishing a Language will more plainly appear: For Difference of Language being generally a Sign of Difference of Nation, an Attempt against a Language, will look like a Design against the Nation that speaks it: And all Nations, or distinct Societies of People, having a natural Inclination to favour their own Community, and being apt to glory in their Antiquity, and to boast of the great Merit and Renown of their Ancestors, they will be very loath to part with their Native Language, and apt to give any Design against it all the Opposition they can.

Besides, such an Undertaking seems to be very difficult, if not impracticable, in the Nature of the Thing. Children must speak as their Parents teach them; they will first use their Mother-Tongue, and as they grow up, they will delight to speak it, because it is the Language of their Parents

112 The Assyrian, Persian, Grecian Monarchies and Ancestors, for whom they retain a great Love and Veneration.

Moreover, their Organs being by Use and Practice formed and adapted to their Native Language; as they will pronounce it more easily, so its Sound will be more agreeable to them: For which Reason, the Languages which we have been accustomed to, seem to be pleasant, and strange ones harsh to us.

The Labour and Difficulty (especially in the Common People) to attain the right Pronunciation of a Language, which they have not learned in their Infancy, do likewise render the Abolition of an old Language more impracticable.

So that the Power of Habit and Custom; the natural Esteem and Affection which Men have for their Fore-fathers; the Facility of Speaking, together with the Agreeableness of hearing a Language which they have been long acquainted with, and the Difficulty of learning a new Language, are almost insuperable Means of the Continuation of any Language, and render its Abolition extremely difficult. And if the Native Inhabitants be superiour in Number, this will make the Difficulty still greater; because it is much more probable, that the few should be induced to speak the Language of the many, than the many that of the few. And therefore,

2. After the best Enquiry that I could make into the Practice of other Nations, with relation to this Point, I do not find in History any Account of the Abolition of a Language.

It doth not appear, that it was done under the Assyrian and Persian Monarchies, (and it had been extremely vain and ridiculous, to have attempted it soon after the Multiplication of Languages, and the Dispersion of Mankind at Babel:) on the contrary we find, that Nebuchadnezzar, the Assyrian Monarch, thus directs one of his Decrees, Dan. 4. 1. Unto all People, Nations, and Languages that dwell in all the Earth, &c. Darius the Median hath the same Direction, Dan. 6. 25. Unto all People, Nations, and Languages that dwell in all the Earth, &c. And it appears from Quintus Curtius, Lib. 5. §. 11. that Darius, the last Persian Monarch, understood Greek, nam haud rudis Græca Lingua Darius erat.

Although the Greek Tongue did spread very far, especially towards the East, (by means of the great Trade which the Grecians drove with their Neighbours in Asia; of the many Colonies which they sent thither; of the great Conquests which they made in it; and lastly, by the Advantage of having the liberal Arts and Sciences in a manner written only in that Language) yet it did not extinguish the vulgar Languages of the Countries, where it was spoken. Instead of attempting this, Alexander the Great, and his Captains, applied themselves to learn the Languages of Asia.

And that the Use of these Languages continued, notwithstanding the great Extent, and the many Excellencies and Advantages of the Greek Tongue, Brerewood proves very amply in the first Chapter of his Book concerning the Diversity of Languages and Religions; out of which I shall mention the following Instances. Although the Greek Language was generally spoken in Anatolia, and the Countries adjacent, which were thick planted with Colonies from Greece; yet it never entirely abolished the vulgar Languages. The Galatians (as St. Jerom observes in Proem. lib. 2. com. Ep. ad Galat.) had their peculiar Languages, besides the Greek Tongue. Strabo also takes notice, in his 14th Book, That the Carians had many Greek Words in their Language; which implies, that it was not the same with the Greek. And in another place, (out of Ephorus) That of Sixteen several Nations inhabiting that Tract of Land, only Three were Grecians, and the rest Barbarians; in which account the Cappadocians, Galatians, Lydians, Maonians, and Cataonians, are not included. It is also remarked by Pliny, l. 7. c. 24. Valer. Max. l. 8. c. 7. & Gell. l. 17. c. 17. That the Twenty Two Languages which Mithridates, King of Pontus, could speak without an Interpreter, were the Languages of so many Nations subject to himself; whose Dominions yet we know to have been contained, for the greatest Part, within Anatolia. And these Observations are, as to some part of them, confirmed to us by the Authority of the Holy Scriptures, Acts 2. 9, 10. where divers of these Regions, as Cappadocia, Pontus, Asia, Phrygia, and Pamphylia, are brought in as Instances of different Languages.

As to the Latin Tongue, or Roman Language; there were many concurring Causes that helped to spread and enlarge it; such as Multitude of Colonies; Donation of Roman Freedom to all the Provinces; Management and Transactions of all Embassies, Law-Suits, and Appeals at Rome, only in the Latin Tongue; the Writing of the Laws, whereby the Provinces were governed in that Language; the strict Obligation that all Prators of Provinces lay under to deliver their Judgments in Latin; insomuch, that (as we read in Dion. Cassius) a Praefect in Greece was laid aside from being a Judge, for being ignorant of the Latin Tongue. The Erection of Schools in sundry Cities of the Provinces to teach Latin. And lastly, the great Care which the Romans designedly took, to enlarge the Language with their Dominions, when Rome became a Monarchy, as Augustin remarks, lib. de Civ. Dei,

19. c. 7. And notwithstanding this, the Romans did not abolish the Vulgar Languages in the Provinces of their Empire, as will appear by the ensuing Instances, to which many more might be added. The learned Men of the East, who lived even in the Flourish of the Roman Empire, have written in Greek, and not in Latin. At the third General Council held at Ephesus, it was desired, that the Letters of the Bishop of Rome should be translated into Greek, that they might be understood. There are at this Day, Fourteen Adarber-Tongues (besides the Latin) in Europe, which remain not only not abolished, but little altered by the Romans, viz. the Irish, British, Cantabrian, Arabick, (spoken in the steep Mountains of Granada, call'd Alpaxaras) Finnick, Dutch, Cauchian, Sclavonish, Illyrian, Greek, Eplrotick, Hungarian, Jazygian, Tartarian, Brerewood p. 21. Even in Countries where the Roman Tongue prevailed most, the Vulgar Languages have not been extinguished; as Africk, Gaul, and Spain.

William the Conqueror attempted openly to abolish the English Tongue, purposing to have subdued the Language, as well as the Country; in order to which he enjoined, That French only should be taught in the Schools here: And that all the Laws of the Land should be written, and all the Pleadings performed in that Language; but he could not accomplish his Design; for the English being far more numerous than the Normans, the Effect and Result of all his Labour was, only that a few French Words were mixed with the English. Such was the Success of the Franks among the Gauls, and of the Goths among the Italians and Spaniards, Brerewood p. 22, 23.

We have several Instances of the same kind still among our selves; the Welsh and Cornish Tongues remain remain still in England, the Irish in Scotland, and the Manks in the Isle of Man: Although all the Laws and Pleadings be confined to the English Tongue; and speaking of English is a necessary Qualification for the Discharge of any Office of considerable Trust or Profit. In a Word, there cannot any Instance be given, that a Language hath been abolished, even in a conquered Country, except where the Inhabitants were either destroyed, or driven out of it.

3. An Attempt to abolish the Language spoken by the Popish Natives of Ireland, will very much delay, if not wholly obstruct their Conversion. By the Abolition of a Language, I suppose, is understood, a bringing it to a total Disuse, so that they who were wont to speak it, shall do so no more. But before this can be done, that is, before we hinder Men from speaking the Language which they only understand, we should first teach them some other in its stead: But how shall we be able to teach a Multitude of People the English Tongue, who have nothing, under God, to depend upon, for the Subsistence of themselves and their Families, but their own Industry and daily Labour? What a vast Number of Schools must we set up at this rate, to teach Old and Young? And how many Thousand Men, Women, and Children, must the Publick maintain at them? And can this be done to a whole Nation in a few Years, or even in an Age, tho' they were never so willing to fall in with the Experiment? Surely any one who hath a due Concern for the Salvation of Souls, and seriously considers this Matter, cannot approve of such an Attempt: For if the Abolition of their Language be a Work that will undoubtedly require a considerable Length of Time, before it can be compleated, what shall in the mean while become of so great a Multitude of People, who live in great Darkness and Ignorance, and wallow in gross Immorality, Superstition, and Idolatry? or rather, what shall become of us for neglecting them? Besides, by this Method we shall not only abandon such of the present Generation as do not understand English, to the present Mischief and the future Evils, which their corrupt Principles and Practices expose them to; but we shall also put the Conversion of their Posterity, upon a mere Chance or Contingence: There not being one Instance, that I know, of the Abolition of a Language; but many, of its being attempted in vain. And, if under a politick Pretence of abolishing their Language, we shall either neglect or postpone their Conversion, we have great Reason to doubt of God's blessing our Endeavours with Success: Because the Obligations that we lie under to promote the Glory of God, and Salvation of our Brethren, do not permit us to put off a Work so necessary, and so charitable, but require us to set about it immediately, Heb. 3. 12, 13. Take heed, Brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil Heart of Unbelief, in departing from the Living God; but exhort one another daily, while it is called to Day, lest any of you be hardened through the Deceitfulness of Sin. And as an Attempt to abolish the Irish Language will certainly delay their Conversion, so it is much to be feared, that it would wholly obstruct it. Men do not only like, but they are generally fond of, their Native Language. And they will not easily part with any Thing, for which they have a great Love and Affection. An Attempt to take it from them, will very much provoke and exasperate them, and consequently prejudice judice them against our Instructions, and render them more averse to our Communion. If we shall endeavour to rob them of their Tongue, we shall be sure to lose their Hearts; without which, I doubt, we shall never be able to convert them.

If it therefore be so hard and inconvenient an Undertaking to abolish a Language, how difficult would it be to extinguish a Religion and a Language together? If the strong Forces of these two Potentates be united, it will be no easie matter to overcome them; at least, they will hold out much longer than we imagine. Let us then begin with Religion first, because it is the more important Concernment of the Two, and because it is more easie and more practicable to convert the Irish, by teaching them the true Principles of Religion in their own Language, than to abolish the Irish Language, and afterwards teach them both our Language and Religion.

1. Religion is the more important Concernment of the two, and that both with respect to them, and to our selves. It is so with respect to them; because the Irish Language, as such, hath nothing of Impiety, Heresie, or Immorality in it; and no Man, I presume, will be condemned at the last Day for speaking Irish; whereas the Idolatry and Superstition, and the many corrupt Principles and Practices of the Church of Rome, do very much hazard their Salvation. And it is so with respect to us; because we see by too many Instances, that although they should speak English, yet they may continue to be Papists, and retain such Dispositions, as their Religion inspires them with, towards us; whereas if they be converted to the Established Religion, they will not only be brought into a safe Way to Salvation, but their good Principles ciples will also secure us; and we shall have no Cause to fear, that their manner of expressing themselves will do us any harm.

2. It is a more easie and practicable Work, to set about the Conversion of the Irish, by performing Religious Offices to them in their own Language, than to abolish it, and afterwards teach them both our Language and Religion. It can hardly be disputed, but that it is much easier for 500 Men of Letters, to acquire so much Knowledge in the Irish Tongue, as to be able to speak and read it, than to teach 500000 illiterate Persons, Old and Young, English so well, as to be sufficiently edified by our Prayers and Sermons.

And having laid aside the Thoughts of abolishing their own Language, let us endeavour to propagate the English Tongue among the Natives. This may be done gradually, without any Prejudice to the Progress of the Reformed Religion among them; by teaching their Children to read English gratis; which, together with the Encouragements, that the English Language hath already in that Kingdom, would soon bring it to be universally used there. But the former can never be done without great Severity and Provocation; whereby their Minds would be more and more alienated from us, and consequently their Conversion rendered more difficult. Besides, there are many Irish Convents, and some Colonies abroad, where Books are published in Irish, and Care is taken to preserve the Language; so that they could do much towards defeating such a Design; and it is probable, that it would meet with greater Opposition than some are a-ware of.

Obje-

Object. XII. The Natives will not come to hear us.
 I answer,

That if we must not endeavour to convert them, because of an Apprehension that they will not come to hear us; for the same Reason we must never attempt it, because their Education giving them Pre-possessions in favour of their own Religion, and in Prejudice of ours, we may always be apprehensive, that they will not be very fond of coming to hear us at first.

But are we sure, without making trial, that they will not come to hear us? How do we know but their Curiosity, or a Desire to hear Performances in their own Language, or rather the Spirit of God, may move them to come to hear us? Shall we neglect an express Duty, because it may happen, that we may perform it in vain? Ought we not rather do our Duty, and leave the Success to God?

If they will not come to us, we should go to them; according to the good Example of our blessed Saviour and his Apostles, who went about doing good; who visited from House to House; who resorted to the Temple, to the Synagogues, and to the other Places of Concourse, that they might have an Opportunity of Preaching the glad Tydings of Salvation to the People. If we did but duly consider the Worth and the Danger of Souls, we should easily be induced to do the like; and we should not endure to see poor ignorant Wretches ready to stumble at every Step into the Pit of Destruction, and not think it our Concernment to endeavour to convince them of their Danger, and shew them how to avoid it.

The Prophets under the Law, were often sent to a Rebellious and stiff-necked People, and were commanded to preach to them, whether they would hear, hear, or whether they would forbear: Our Blessed Saviour and his Apostles, offered the Means of Salvation to those, who they knew would reject them. Wherefore, we who are Sinners our selves, and stand in so much need of God's Mercy, and are so much obliged to him for his Patience and Long-suffering, should not think much to wait long, to make many Trials, and to use frequent and repeated Endeavours to reclaim others.

Besides all this, some who make the Experiment, find that they do come to our Service performed in their own Tongue; many of them have come, notwithstanding that their Priests curse them, and threaten to excommunicate them for it; and some of their Hearts have been opened, as Lydia's was, to receive the Truth, and they have been converted.

XIII. Others object, That the Endeavours of some to convert the Irish, have not succeeded. Such a Minister laboured in vain in such a Place, and another in another Place.

I answer, That if Christ and his Apostles had left off preaching the Gospel, because they succeeded not in some Places, the Light of the Gospel had never reached us. But if some have laboured in vain in one Part of the Vineyard, others have succeeded in another Part of it. And one would think, that this were sufficient Encouragement even to the Faint-hearted and the Lazy, to set about this Work.

The Reason why the Conversion of the Irish hath been fruitless and ineffectual in many Parts of the Kingdom is, because it was never made a constant and general Work throughout the whole Kingdom. The united Endeavours of the Clergy and Laity, have not been employed against the Unanimous Opposition of the Popish Natives; Attempts were

were made to convert them only now and then, here and there, by a single Bishop or private Clergyman; and they were discouraged or baffled by Difficulties and Obstructions thrown into their way, not only by those of the Church of Rome, but by many of our own Communion. Let us therefore try what a constant and universal Attempt throughout the Kingdom will do; let us use all fit Means, and set all Hands to work; and if the Event should not answer our Expectation, we may, however, comfort our selves with the Thoughts of having done our Duty, and of being pure from the Blood of all Men, Acts 20. 26.

Upon the whole, it plainly appears, that the Objections against the Irish Language have not any Foundation either in Reason or Religion: And it is obvious to observe, that they are grounded altogether upon that National Prejudice and Aversion, which still remains among too many of the English and Irish Nations to one another. I know some of the Natives of that Kingdom, who can speak English, and yet will not, for no other Reason, but because it is English. The same Motive, on the other side, induceth some to be very earnest for abolishing the Irish Language. They have a Dislike to the Nation, and this draweth them insensibly into a Dislike to the Language, for which no other Reason can be given, but that it is Irish; if this were not so, there would be the same Necessity for abolishing the Irish Language in Scotland. Besides, it is not the Language of the Court, but of a poor, ignorant and depressed People, from whom we can have no Expectations; and this, together with the Trouble of Learning an obsolete Language, encreaseth Mens Prejudices against it. But whatever may be the Causes of that that great Aversion which some have entertained against the Language; an open and avowed Attempt to abolish it, is not the Way to unite the two Nations in their Hearts and Affections: Difference of Religion is, that which sets them at the greatest Distance from one another; and if that were taken away, all other Differences would dwindle into nothing; or if they continued, they would do no harm. And from what hath been said, it appears, that Preaching, and Printing the Bible and Common-Prayer-Book in Irish, are the necessary Means for attaining this good End.

But it may be said, That such Ministers as shall be employed to perform the Offices of Religion to the Natives in their own Language, may translate the Bible and Common-Prayer-Book, extempore, while they are officiating, and that there will be no need of Printing them; by which Means the Propagation of the Language will be prevented.

Enough hath been said already, to prove that we need be under no Apprehensions from the Language. But however, an extemporary Version of the Scripture and Liturgy, delivered to the People, hath as great a Tendency to keep up the Use of the Language among them, as the reading of a Printed one.

Then their Translations, be they right or wrong, must pass for Scripture among the Common-People; by which Means they shall have an Opportunity indeed of Preaching Popery, Fanaticism, or Sedition it self, (which is made a great Objection to the sending of Missionaries among them.) But surely, after a serious Consideration of this Matter, any one who has a just Regard for the Divine Authority of the Scripture, and a due Concern for the sound and wholesome Instruction of the People, would not approve of such a dangerous Method, if it were practicable, as it is not; for the Irish Language is so barren and defective, that it is not in the Power of the most skilful in it, to translate any other Language into Irish, without Study and Premeditation.

I proceed to the Fourth Article, Viz.

That a sufficient Number of Charity-Schools be erected, for the Instruction of the Irish Children gratis, in the English Tongue, and the Establish'd Church, and that, &c.

This Article is grounded upon the great Usefulness of Religious Education in general, and upon the many Advantages in particular, which the Publick will receive, by having these Children instructed in the Church Catechism.

It is propos'd, That they be taught to read, not only that they may be more fit for Business; but especially, that they may be more capable of Catechetical Instruction, and improving in Christian Knowledge, which very few illiterate Persons attain to, in any tolerable Measure or Degree.

Now, by the Help of these Schools, great Numbers of Children will be bred up in the Knowledge of Vertue and Religion, who would otherwise be not only abandoned to utter Darkeness and Ignorance, but would also be trained up, as it is too much to be feared, in a vicious and dissolute Course of Life.

Their young and tender Minds will be early acquainted with the Fear of God, and with the Practice of Piety; and this, in all Probability, will have a mighty Influence upon their Behaviour and Conversation, while they live in this World, according to the Divine Saying, Prov. 22. 6. Train up a Child in the Way he should go, and when he is Old,

Old, he will not depart from it. And there is not any Means more effectual for attaining this End, than to instruct them in our Church Catechism, which is in all respects excellently fitted to the Institution of Children, and Beginners in Religion.

For our Catechism is written in the most easie and familiar Stile, all hard Words and obscure Expressions being on purpose avoided, that the lowest Capacities may be instructed by it.

As to the Matter of it; it doth not consist of abstruse and difficult Doctrines, that may exercise the Wits of the ablest Divines, but is wholly made up of the uncontroverted Points of Religion, which may be easily understood, and apprehended aright without Danger of Mistake.

This Catechism is also short, and may be readily learned: All superfluous and unnecessary Things, which are a Burden to the Minds of young and weak People, are avoided, and the Fundamentals of Religion are comprized in so small a Compass, that they may be committed to the Memory with very little Trouble.

And that which crowns all, is, that it is compleat, and sufficient to inform the Mind with saving Knowledge, and is wanting and deficient in nothing, that is absolutely requisite to be known in order to eternal Salvation; so that whosoever shall thoroughly understand the Church Catechism, shall be sufficiently instructed to everlasting Life.

By this means also the whole Community will reap many Benefits. For hereby these poor misguided Children will have wholesome and substantial Nourishment administred to their Souls, instead of the corrupt and superstitious Principles and Doctrines of the Church of Rome. They will be taught to make the weightier Matters of the

Law, their greatest Care and Concernment. The Difference between Good and Evil, between Things lawful and unlawful, necessary and indifferent, will be sufficiently imprinted on their Minds; and this will prevent them from being scrupulous and superstitious, and will make them easie in their Religion, and in their Conversation, both to themselves and others. And hereby they will be taught to be useful and orderly Members both in Church and State, by submitting themselves to every Ordinance of Man for the Lord's sake, and by preserving the Peace and Unity of the Church, and the Quiet and Tranquillity of the Kingdom. It is also worthy of our Consideration, that by this Means a great Number of Children will be brought up in the Establish'd Religion, who must otherwise be filled from their Infancy, with the greatest Aversion and Prejudice to it; especially if the Benefit of these Schools be extended to poor Protestant Children, whose Parents cannot give them useful and religious Education.

And it is to be presumed, that it will not be of any dangerous Consequence to the Common-wealth, to teach so many Irish Boys to Read and Write: If they were to be instructed in Military Discipline, and Weapons put into their Hands instead of Primers and Catechisms, this might give some Umbrage; but it is hoped, that Reading and Writing only, will not make them capable of doing Mischief to the Publick: It is probable, that the good Principles, which by this Means will be taught them, will have better Influence upon them, and will, by the Grace of God, make them better Subjects and better Christians, and more useful in their Generation, than otherwise they would be. It is certain, that Religious Education

hath not only this natural Tendency, but also the Divine Promise; that it shall be generally blessed with good Effects.

Moreover, these Schools may be so ordered, that Children may be prevented from learning a Habit of Idleness at them; they may be instructed, before they can bring any considerable Benefit to their Parents by their Labour; and if they continue longer, they may be allowed to assist their Parents in Harvest, and upon other necessary Occasions, and be thereby accustomed to Work. But Experience will best satisfy us in this Point. The People of England, and of the Northern Parts of Scotland, are for the most part taught to Read and Write, and they are nevertheless, both very industrious People; and it is well known from the Trial of several Years, that Charity-Schools have done much good in England.

But the most weighty Objection against these Schools is, That it is to be feared that the Parents of these Children may pervert them again, and bring them back to the Popish Religion. And it is probable, that some of them, if they be left to their own Liberty, may do so; but it may be hoped, that others will not: For I know many Instances where the Natives give up their Children to be educated in the Protestant Religion, and permit them to continue in it; for the Popish Religion lies now under great Discouragements, and is losing Ground in many Parts of that Kingdom: Praying in an unknown Tongue, is generally disliked in some Places that I know; many of that Communion are not satisfied with their Priests, for depriving them of the Use of the Scriptures, and do not believe Transubstantiation; there are great Numbers of them whose Affections to Popery are much cooled and abated, and these, in all Probability, will suffer their Children to adhere to the Protestant Religion, considering withal, the Temporal Advantages that may accrew to them thereby.

Wherefore, although it may happen that some of these Children may return to the Church of Rome, yet these Schools are worthy of Publick Encouragement, for the sake of others, who will, as it may be hoped, continue to be Protestants, by the Connivance of their Parents, and by virtue of the good Principles instilled into them. But notwithstanding what hath been said, it will be worthy of the Publick Consideration, to prevent any Inconvenience this way, by obliging the Parents that their Children, brought up at these Schools, shall go to Church while they are under their immediate Care, under the Penalty of paying for their Education, or by any other expedient Means whereby they may be hindred from turning Papists. If our Law hath not already provided a sufficient Remedy, by preventing a Succession of Popish Clergy; which, whenever it takes place, will effectually hinder their returning to the Church of Rome.

I come now to shew the Reasons, upon which the Sixth Article is grounded.

It must be acknowledged, that if all those who call themselves Christians, were of the same Disposition with St. Paul, who did not seek his own Profit, but the Profit of many, that they might be saved, 1 Cor. 10. 33. If they were as publick-spirited, and as zealous in propagating the common Christianity, and in promoting the universal Happiness and Welfare of Mankind, as Christians are obliged to be; True Religion would spread much faster in the World than it doth. The Kingdom of Darknes would soon be

be subdued, and the Kingdom of our Blessed Saviour would be set up, and established in all Parts of the Earth, and there would be little or no need of incorporating a Society for propagating the Reformed Religion in Ireland: For every one would do his Part in so good a Work, without being induced to it by any special Motive, or particular Obligation.

But it is a sad Truth, that the greatest part of those, who profess the Christian Religion, are very cold and indifferent in this Matter, and shew no more Concern for advancing the Glory of God, and the Salvation of Souls, than if they were not at all obliged to do it.

Even those, who have made some Attainments in Religion, are apt to be somewhat remiss in the Discharge of this Duty: It is a Duty incumbent upon every one, and therefore they hope, that others will take the Trouble of it upon them. For which Reason it is generally observ'd, That what is every one's Business, is seldom made the Object of any one's Care or Concern.

Therefore, for the better Discharge of Duties of this Nature, which lie upon Christians at large, it is by Experience found requisite, that they be committed to the particular Care of some Persons, who may upon that Account think themselves more immediately concern'd to see them accomplished.

And this is more especially necessary to secure and facilitate the Performance of these Duties, when they are like to be encumbered with great Charge and Expence, or to be obstructed by much Opposition and Discouragement; as the Conversion of the Irish is more than likely to be. For,

1. As to the Charge and Expence; it will be necessary (as hath been already observed) that a competent Number of Ministers be provided and encouraged, by a suitable Maintenance, to instruct the Natives, and to perform the Offices of Religion to them in their own Language: And in order to this, these Ministers must be supplied with Bibles and Common-Prayer Books at least. And for the more effectual accomplishing this good Work, it will be requisite, that Charity-Schools be erected, to teach their Children to Read and Write English, and to instruct them in the true Principles of Religion. Therefore, to defray this Expence, it is presumed, that an incorporated Society, capable of collecting the publick and private Charity of the Queen's Subjects, of receiving Legacies, and making Purchases, will be very useful, if not necessary.

2. It cannot be expected, but this Work will meet with many Difficulties and Obstructions. When any Design is set on foot, which hath a great Tendency to promote the Glory of God, and Salvation of Men; the Adversary of Souls will do his utmost to defeat it. The Romish Priests will undoubtedly give it all the Opposition they can. The Popish Nobility and Gentry, especially those who have lost their Estates, and have not any Prospect of recovering them but by a Foreign Power, will leave nothing undone that will obstruct the Conversion of the Irish. The Popish Princes, who find their Account in supporting the Romish Interest in Ireland, will do much to baffle it. Emissaries will be sent from abroad, to hearten the Irish, and to keep them fast to their old Principles; and there is no doubt, but Money will be expended to hinder the Progress of the Reformation;

tion ; for which Purpose there is a large Fund at Rome, call'd the Church's Stock. And this surely must be the Reason, why Works of this nature meet with little or no Encouragement, where Money can prevent it. Sincere Converts are persecuted by them, that others may be deterred from following their Example ; and false Profelytes are employed, to make a Shew of coming over to us, that under a Pretence of forsaking Rome, they may be more capable of serving it : For what they do under the Mask of a false Conversion, is imputed to the whole Body of Converts. And the Consequence of this too often is, that some conceive a Prejudice against all Profelytes, thinking them to be all alike ; whereby true Converts will not only suffer much, but be also staggered, and others discouraged from coming over to our Communion. Lastly, the many Sects among us, who are not desirous that any additional Strength should be brought to the Church, will find out Ways and Means of discouraging it.

Therefore it is humbly conceived, that an incorporated Society, of such as are well-disposed to this Work, will be very useful and helping towards overcoming all those Difficulties. For the Conversion of the Irish being the profess'd Design and Business of the Society, it may be expected, that they will take better Care of it, and promote it more effectually, than if it were left altogether to the Care of every single Person. Besides, an united Body of Men acting in Concert, will have greater Power and Influence, than the same Persons acting separately can have.

And if a competent Number of the Nobility and Gentry were received into this Society, the Countenance and Assistance of the Laity being thereby added added to the Labours and Endeavours of the Clergy, such an united Society would have greater Capacities of forwarding this Work, than can otherwise be well expected.

For the Nobility and Gentry, engaged in this Corporation, would, in all probability, befriend their own Undertaking in both Houses of Parliament, and upon all other Occasions. They would be capable of removing many of the Difficulties and Hindrances, that it may meet with throughout the Kingdom. It would be much in their Power, to promote it among their Neighbours and Tenants; for the Irish are a People that are much swayed by their Landlords, and such as have any Power over them. And they could be very useful and assisting, in obtaining the Charity of others, and in contributing to it themselves; and without such Help and such Concurrence of the Laity, so laborious, so difficult, and so expensive an Undertaking is likely to go on, and to be accomplished but very slowly.

We may be fully convinced of this, from the Experience of this Kingdom; whilst the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts was left at large, it spread but little; but the great Progress which the Christian Religion hath lately made in the East and West-Indies, by God's Blessing upon the remarkable Zeal and Piety of the Society for Propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts, and of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, shews us plainly how useful such a Society might be in this Kingdom.

And the joining of some of the Laity to the Clergy in this Society, need not give any Umbrage, as if any Encroachment were to be made thereby upon the Rights of the Clergy; for by being a Member

Member of such a Society, a Layman doth not acquire any Power, Authority, or Jurisdiction, that is proper and peculiar to the Clergy: He is called upon only to give his Advice and Assistance, his Countenance and Encouragement, to this good Work. And in the Charter (as in all other Charters) it may be provided, That the Society shall not make any By-Laws, Statutes, or Ordinances repugnant to the Laws and Statutes of the Realm; whereby the Rights and Privileges of the Clergy may be fully secured to them, and such a Society effectually prevented from invading them.

Thus I have endeavoured to shew the Grounds upon which the Methods proposed for the Conversion of the Irish are built, and to answer the Objections made to them.

Before I conclude this Argument, I reckon myself obliged to offer something further to the Consideration of those, who are against publishing the Scriptures and Liturgy in Irish; because it seems to be a Matter of great Moment and Importance, and very much affecting the Honour and Piety of both our Church and Nation.

It can be very easily proved, that to hinder the Scriptures from being published in Irish, is, to deprive such of the Natives, as understand that Language only, of a Right which God hath given them; that it is to take away the Means of Salvation from them; that it is to do that, for which we severely Censure the Church of Rome, and for which we justly separate from her; and that it will render their Conversion impracticable.

I am verily perswaded, That this Matter hath not been fully consider'd; and that, after a serious Reflection upon it, every one who believeth the Divine Authority of the Scriptures, and considers how useful and necessary the Knowledge of them is to the Salvation of Mens Souls, will not be against publishing them in the Irish Tongue. And, I know not how I can do better Service, or how I can make a more thankful Return to those, for whom I am obliged in Points of Duty and Gratitude, to have the greatest Honour and Esteem, than by setting it in a clear Light before them. In order to which, these following Considerations are with all Sincerity and Respect, submitted to the pious Thoughts and Meditations of the Christian Reader.

1. The End of any Writing is, that it may be read; the Design of any one who writes to another, must surely be, that he peruse the Writing which he directs to him. Therefore, it having pleased the most gracious and merciful God, out of his infinite Love and Favour to Mankind, to direct the Revelation of his Will to all Men without Exception, and without Respect of Persons or Nations; to all who every where call on the Name of the Lord Jesus, and consequently to the Irish as well as the English, or any other People; to hinder the publishing of the Scriptures in Irish, is to deprive such of the Natives as understand that Language only, of the Use and Benefit of that, which God hath not only allow'd them, but expressly directed to them.

Nay, God Almighty having not only directed his Word to all Men, but also commanded all Men to search it; as it argues great Contempt and Disregard of the Divine Majesty, in any one, not to read what God hath directed to him, and what he hath commanded him to read: So for any Man, or Society of Men, to debar others of the free use of that, which God hath not only allow'd, but but commanded them to use, is both to deprive them of a Right and Privilege, which God hath given them; and also to acquit them of a Duty, which he hath laid upon them.

2. To hinder the publishing of the Bible in Irish, is to deprive the Natives of one of the principal Means of Salvation.

The Word of God is a Light unto our Feet, and a Lamp unto our Paths; the Scriptures are able to make us wise unto Salvation, all Things necessary to Eternal Life being plainly delivered to us therein; therefore, all Men should have the free use of them; because eternal Salvation being a Matter of the greatest Moment and Concernment, all Methods should be used, and no Means either prohibited or neglected of obtaining it.

Besides, the Scriptures being the Word of God himself, as we cannot but be therefore firmly persuaded of the Truth of them, so they cannot but have the strongest Influence and Operation upon our Hearts and Actions; the Word of God himself being much more to be regarded, than the Word or Writing of any Man, as having infinitely greater Advantages to recommend it self to us, than any Humane Composition.

To this it may be added, that not only from the Scriptures themselves, but also from Experience, we have good Grounds to believe, that God Almighty enforces and sets home his Word upon the Minds and Consciences of Men, and blesteth the due use of it, with the Concurrence of his Holy Spirit, much more to be sure, than the Works or Writings of any Mortal Man.

the indispensable Ordinances of Religion, and the necessary Means of Salvation. For which we have sufficient Authority in Scripture, where we are said to be regenerated by the Word of God, 1 Pet. 1. 23. where we are taught, that it doth convert the Soul, that it giveth Wisdom to the Simple, that it rejoiceth the Heart, and giveth Light unto the Eyes, Psal. 119. 7, 8. where it is declared to be the engrafted Word, which is able to save our Souls, Jam. 1. 18.

And for Confirmation of this, I may appeal to the Testimony of every good Christian. As for such as have not the Love and Fear of God in their Hearts, they have no Sense, no Knowledge of this Matter; for the natural Man receiveth not the Things of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 14. But every sincere Christian knows full-well, that the Word of God is Quick and Powerful, and that it hath the greatest Force and Efficacy upon him in all the Cases and Circumstances of his Life, and that it worketh effectually in them that believe, 1 Thes. 2. 13.

Therefore, as we ought most thankfully to acknowledge the unspeakable Happiness of having the Scriptures in our own Language; so we ought not only to allow, but also to promote and encourage the free use of it to all other Men, that so they may be saved thereby as well as we.

3. This is a Practice, for which we justly condemn the Church of Rome.

It is the avowed Doctrine and Principle of all the Reformed Churches, that all Men have a Right to search the Scriptures, and that in order thereunto, they should be translated into all Languages, that every Tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the Glory of God the Father, Phil. 2. 11. and

and that the everlasting Gospel might be preach'd unto them that dwell on the Earth, and to every Nation, and Kindred, and Tongue, and People, Rev. 14. 6. And for denying the People this Liberty, the Church of Rome is charged by the Protestant Divines with being guilty of Sacrilege, and of great Cruelty to the Souls of Men. I might fill up a great Volumn of Quotations to this purpose, but I shall trouble the Reader only with Arch-Bishop Tillotson's Judgment and Censure of this Practice, Vol. fol. p. 351, 352. I observe the great and inexcusable Fault of those who keep Men in Ignorance of Religion, and take away from them so excellent and necessary a Means of Divine Knowledge as the Holy Scriptures are. This our Saviour calls, taking away the Key of Knowledge, and shutting the Kingdom of Heaven against Men. That is, doing what in them lies to render it impossible for Men to be saved. For this he denounceth a terrible Woe against the Teachers of the Jewish Church: Though they did not proceed so far as to deprive Men of the Use of the Holy Scriptures, but only of the right Knowledge and Understanding of them. This alone is a horrible Impiety, to lead Men into a false Sense and Interpretation of Scripture, but much greater, to forbid them the Reading of it. This is to stop Knowledge at the very Fountain-head; and not only to lead Men into Error, but to take away from them all Possibility of rectifying their Mistakes. And can there be a greater Sacrilege, than to rob Men of the Word of God, the best Means in the World of acquainting them with the Will of God, and their Duty, and the Way to Eternal Happiness? To keep the People in Ignorance of that, which is necessary to save them, is to judge them unworthy of eternal Life, and to declare it does not belong to them, and maliciously to contrive the Eternal Ruin and Destruction of their Souls. To

To lock up the Scriptures and the Service of God from the People in an unknown Tongue, what is this but in effect to forbid Men to know God, and to serve him; to render them incapable of knowing what is the good and acceptable Will of God; of joining in his Worship, or performing any Part of it, or receiving any Benefit or Edification from it? And what is, if this be not, to shut the Kingdom of Heaven against Men? This is so outrageous a Cruelty to the Souls of Men, that it is not to be excused upon any Pretence whatsoever. This is to take the surest and most effectual way in the World to destroy those for whom Christ died, and directly to thwart the great Design of God our Saviour, who wou'd have all Men to be saved, and to come to the Knowledge of the Truth. Men may miscarry with their Knowledge, but they are sure to perish for want of it, p. 351.

With great Reason then does our Saviour denounce so heavy a Woe against such Teachers. Of Old, in the like Case, God by his Prophet severely threatens the Priests of the Jewish Church, for not instructing the People in the Knowledge of God, Hos. 4. 6. My People are destroyed for lack of Knowledge: Because thou hast rejected Knowledge, I will also reject thee; thou shalt be no more a Priest to me: Seeing thou hast forgotten the Law of thy God, I will also forget thy Children. God, you see, lays the Kuin of so many Souls at their Doors, and will require their Blood at their Hands. So many as perish for want of Knowledge, and eternally miscarry by being deprived of the necessary Means of Salvation, their Destruction shall be charged upon those who have taken away the Key of Knowledge, and shut the Kingdom of Heaven against Men.

And

For which we condemn the Church of Rome. 139

And it is just with God to punish such Persons, not only at the Occasion, but as the Authors of their Ruine. For who can judge otherwise, but that they who deprive Men of the necessary Means to any End, do purposely design to hinder them of attaining that End? And whatever may be pretended in this Case; to deprive Men of the Holy Scriptures, and to keep them ignorant of the Service of God; and yet while they do so, to make a shew of an earnest Desire of their Salvation, is just such a Mockery, as if one of you that is a Master, should tell his Apprentice, how much you desire he should thrive in the World, and be a Rich Man, but all the while keep him ignorant in his Trade, in order to his being Rich; and with the strictest Care imaginable, conceal from him the best Means of Learning that, whereby alone he is likely to thrive and get an Estate.

These are severe Truths, and they fall heavily upon the Church of Rome; but they come with much greater Weight, upon such Protestants as would deprive a Nation of the free Use of the Scriptures; Because it is contrary to their own Principles, and is a corrupt Practice, for which, among others, they have separated from the Church of Rome. And let not any one think to avoid the Force of this Argument, by saying, That such of the Natives as can read, can read English, and if they be so disposed, they may freely read the Scriptures in the English Tongue; because there are some of the Natives (although the Number be but very small) who can read Irish, and yet do understand, and can read no other Language: Besides, the Scriptures should be published in Irish, for the Use and Benefit of the great Multitude of them, who do not understand English: For a Man is not acquitted from searching the Scriptures, and consulting ing the Mind and Will of God therein, concerning his Duty and Happiness, because he cannot read; but he ought to get others to read the Word of God to him, and he should frequent the publick Worship where it is constantly read; and the Pastors of Christ's Church, to whose Care the Souls of the People are committed, are bound to read it to them. And how this can be done, without publishing the Scriptures in Irish, I cannot tell.

It might be expected, that every one who has the Conversion of the Irish at Heart, should incline to try this Method, from the Success which it had in former Times, whereof Sir James Ware gives an Instance in his Annals of Ireland, in the following Words, Anno Domini 1571. & Anno Reginae (viz. Elizabethæ) 13. “ This Year the Irish Characters for Printing, were first brought into this Kingdom, by Nicholas Walsh, Chancellor of St. Patrick's in Dublin, and John Kerne Treasurer of the same: And it was ordered, that the Prayers of the Church should be printed in that Character and Language, and a Church set apart in the chief Town of every Diocese, where they were to be read, and a Sermon preached to the Common People; which was instrumental to convert many of the ignorant Sort in those Days.

Lastly, The Conversion of the Irish is not practicable, if we will not allow them the free Use of the Scriptures in their own Language.

If we would treat the Popish Natives, as Christians ought to deal with one another: The fair and honest, the proper and effectual Way to convert them, is to convince them, that their corrupt Principles and Practices are directly repugnant and contrary to the Will of God revealed to us in his holy holy Word. But if we will not permit them to have the Use of this Book in their own Language, How can we in Reason and Modesty appeal to it for the Determination of our Differences in Religion? May not an Irishman justly answer? This Book is prohibited to me, it is lock'd up in an unknown Tongue, I must not judge for my self; wherefore, I hope you will excuse me, if I do not quit a Religion that I have been bred up in, for one that I must take upon Trust. Besides, if the Scripture and Liturgy must not be publish'd in Irish, we cannot perform the Offices of Religion to them in their own Language.

Upon the whole; if we would bring the popish Natives, to a sincere Profession of the true Religion, the Gospel Means must be used to that End. Other Methods have been tried in vain; sometimes Severities have been inflicted, but this way hath not succeeded with them, and hath never been successful in propagating the Truth. Other times, they have been neglected, and left to their own Delusions, and our Nation hath often been punished in kind for these Things, by feeling the cruel and barbarous Effects of those Tenets and Principles, from which they neglected to convert the Natives. One would think, that the Remembrance of those horrid Tragedies, which the Popish Religion hath acted in that Kingdom, were enough to warn and excite us to prevent the like for the future, least that an offended God should once more use them as Rods to chastise us, for neglecting a Duty which the Gospel of Christ, Charity to the Souls of Men, and our own Interest, both Temporal and Eternal, do oblige us not to neglect. Let the Wisdom of this World therefore be for once laid aside, and let us try how the plain and honest, the mild and gentle Methods of the Gospel will succeed; which as they are most agreeable to the Frame and Constitution of Human Nature, so they have the best Claim and Title to God's Blessing, without which, all Humane Endeavours will come to nothing.

This is a Work so pious and charitable in it self, and tending so much to promote the publick Good, that it is worthy of the greatest Care, and best Endeavour of every true Protestant. And therefore, let us not defer it any longer, but set about it with that Zeal and Alacrity, which the Goodness and Importance of the Thing deserves.

If it were once heartily undertaken; if all those who are concerned to promote it, would put on a firm and vigorous Resolution of prosecuting it, there is great Reason to hope, that it would be soon accomplished: For although there may be some Difficulties in the way, yet we have many Advantages on our side, to help us in going thro' with it. Our Service, when performed in Irish, is very pleasing to the Natives, and much more acceptable than Prayers in an unknown Tongue; for Men love to understand their Prayers, as well as any thing else that they hear. Our Clergy far exceed the Popish Priests in Learning, Regularity, and a Capacity of doing good Offices to the People. We have the strongest Arguments taken from the Word of God, from plain Reason, and their own Senses, to convince them by. And we can urge them with the Promise of the Life which is, and of that which is to come. So that, one would think, it were not so difficult a Matter to prevail with the Irish, and to bring them over to the Established Church, as some do imagine. Indeed, if due use were made of the many Oppor-

Opportunities and Advantages which we have; if the Benefits of their Conversion were set in a full Light before them; and withal, if they were invited and encouraged, by kind and generous Usage, to unite with us, it is very probable, that they would soon be melted down into a Compliance, and that not only our Difference about Religion, but all our other unhappy Divisions would be taken away.

Other Nations have extended their Religion with their Conquests. In all other Countries, where the Reformed Religion is established, it hath spread much faster and wider among the Inhabitants, than in Ireland. The Welsh and Highlanders have embraced the Protestant Communion, but the Irish Natives continue still in Popery. When several Nations and Sorts of People happen to live together in one Kingdom or Commonwealth, they unite soon in one common Interest. The British, Danes, Saxons, and Normans have long since become one People, with respect to Religion and Civil Interest. But it is not so in Ireland. How comes this to pass? Is it owing to the Nature of the Climate, or the Constitution of the People? Is it impossible to convert an Irishman, and to reconcile him to the English Interest? Or rather, Are there not some Defects and Mismanagements of our own side, that have hindred this Union? I must neither wholly clear the Irish, nor lay the Blame altogether upon them. But, as for our part, the Causes of this great Misfortune, so fatal and pernicious both to the British and Irish, and so repugnant to the general Happiness and Welfare of these Kingdoms, are very evident and obvious.

They are not Protestants, because proper Methods have not been used to make them such. In all other Protestant Countries, the Popish Religion hath lost Ground apace, by instructing the People, and performing the Offices of Religion to them in their own Language. And the Reason why the Reformed Religion hath not made the same Progress in Ireland, is, because the same Means have not been duly used there.

As to Difference of Interest, which hath continued too long in that Kingdom, one would think, that for several Centuries after the English went into Ireland, it was not intended, the Natives should run into a Coalition, and become one People with them. The Design of their first settling there, seems to have been the Acquisition of larger Territories of Land to live upon, and not the Addition of a greater Number of Subjects to the Crown of England; which was a great Error in Politicks; and however it might serve the Interest of private Persons, brought little or no real Advantage to the Publick. And the fix'd and immoveable Resolution for some Ages, of pursuing the same Design, was the chief Cause that rendred the Reduction of Ireland so long and so difficult a Work. For all People have a natural Right to maintain themselves, and their Families, and to enjoy the Fruit of their own Labours, that so they may live as comfortably in this World, as they can: And since this must be done some where or other, they seem to have an Hereditary Title and Privilege to do it in their Native Country; which therefore they will not part with, without the greatest Opposition, and most obstinate Resistance. Sir John Davis (a very judicious Gentleman, and one who knew the Interest terest of both the Kingdoms very well) assigns this, as one of the true Causes, which so long hindred the Irish from submitting; in his historical Relations published with Sir James Ware's Annals of Ireland.

“ The Defects (saith he) which hindred the “ Perfection of the Conquest of Ireland, were, the “ faint Prosecution of the War, and the Looseness “ [or Mismanagement] of the Civil Government. The Irish were generally reputed Aliens, “ or rather Enemies to the Crown of England; “ insomuch as they were not only disabled to “ bring any Actions, but they were so far out “ of the Protection of the Law, as it was often “ adjudged no Felony to kill a meer Irishman.
 “ This appears by sundry Records, wherein Judgment is demanded, if they shall be answered in “ Actions brought by them, p. 23, 24. And when “ they desired to be admitted to the Benefit and “ Protection of the English Laws, they could not “ obtain it, p. 25. And (as he proceeds) great “ Mischiefs did grow from this: It excluded them “ from being Subjects: And by being debarred “ from Trade and Commerce with Civil Men, “ and shut out of Towns and Cities, they were “ driven to Woods and Mountains, there to live “ in a barbarous manner.

This was not agreeable to the Practice of other Kingdoms and Common-wealths; the Romans not only allowed the Benefit of their Laws to the Nations whom they conquered, but also gave them the Freedom of Rome. William the Conqueror governed the Normans and English by the same Law. And Edward the 1st did communicate the English Laws to the Welsh.

And when Sir John (who was sent over to enquire into the State of that Kingdom, and to report his Opinion of the fittest Means to be used for preventing any more Disturbances in it,) laid these Matters before King James. the 1st, the Irish were immediately received into the Protection of the English Laws, and were allowed to have the Benefit and Advantage of them as well as the English. And his Majesty, with the Advice of the Privy-Council, did not exclude them in the Ulster Plantation, as they had been in the first English Colonies, with a Purpose to root them out, but made a mix'd Plantation of British and Irish, that they might grow up together into one Nation.

~~For our Religion will make them better Subjects,~~

This was a good Step towards bringing them in, and making them good Subjects; but there was one Thing still wanting, and that was, their Conversion to the Protestant Religion, without which, they can never be reckoned true Friends to the English Government and Constitution, as it is now established. For, whatever some may pretend, he who believes the Pope's Supremacy, and that if his own Sovereign Prince should happen to be declared an Heretick, or excommunicate by the Pope, he not only may, but ought to do all that in him lies to deprive him of his Kingdom; to disobey his Laws; to oppose his Government; and to subvert all establish'd Rule and Order, both in Church and State, can never be esteemed a good Subject. So that we cannot be secure of the Irish, until they become Protestants; the want of which, unavoidably widens other Differences: For in order to preserve our selves from the pernicious Principles and Practices of Papists, we find it necessary to discourage and weaken the Popish Interest in Ireland; which cannot be done without using some Severity: And it being natural to Mankind, to dislike Severity, and to get rid of it as soon soon as they can; the Effect of their bad Principles, and of the Treatment which they meet with upon the Account of them, is, That they take all Opportunities of making off the English Government. When any convenient Juncture happens, they break out into open War; to suppress which, (as in all Civil Wars and Rebellions) the Publick sustains double Loss. They maintain a secret Correspondence with Foreign Princes, and do what in them lies to promote their Interest; hoping by their Assistance to recover their Country, and to have their Religion established. And when they dare not venture to take up Arms in their own Country, they enlist, in time of War, in the Fleets and Armies of our Enemies; and in time of Peace they help to People their Colonies abroad: Insomuch that Ireland is a Nursery to supply some neighbouring Popish Kingdoms with Men, when they have Occasion for them; by which Means the Crown of Great Britain and Ireland, loses a greater Number of Native Subjects, (who might be very useful in War and Peace, at Home and Abroad) than have been got by all the Popish Persecutions. So that in order to compleat and establish the Reduction of Ireland, and to render it a more useful Branch of our Monarchy, it is absolutely necessary that the Protestant Religion be propagated among the Natives. And as the Expence of effecting this might be easily born,* so the Benefits and Advantages accruing thereby to Her Majesty, and to the whole Community, would be great and many.

If the Irish were converted to the Protestant Religion establish'd in Ireland, the Strength of Her Majesty's Dominions would be much increased.

* The Yearly Charge of four Regiments, or the Expence of one Year's War in Ireland, would do it. There

There are (as it is computed) at least 1200000 Irish Papists in that Kingdom; they are of a healthy and vigorous Constitution, and multiply as fast as any People in the World. Such a Number of Persons brought over to our Religion and Interest, would be no small Addition. Nay, as Matters stand between them and us, every Profelyte would be in effect two Persons gained to the Publick; for instead of serving the Interest of Foreign Princes, and promoting the Designs of our Enemies; they would become useful and sincere Members of the same Body Politick, and have the Common Welfare equally at Heart with our selves.

This would also very much tend to render the publick Peace of these Kingdoms more secure and lasting. All Fears and Jealousies would be removed from that Quarter, which is always gloomy and cloudy, and from whence Storms have often arisen. We should have less ground to be apprehensive of Popish Designs, if so many Instruments of executing them, were converted to a better Religion. We would be safe and easie in the Neighbourhood of those whose Principles are always dangerous, and have been sometimes pernicious to these Kingdoms. And Foreign Princes would lose that Interest in the Irish, whereby they have been capable, not only of embroiling us at Home, but also of attacking us with our own People Abroad.

By this Means also, Ireland would become more beneficial and advantageous to this Kingdom, than it is; even that great Profit which it brings to England, would be considerably augmented. The Irish Western Winds blow a great deal of good Wealth and Riches to this Country. It cannot be less than a Million every Year. For there is above half

148 Their Conversion would encrease the Strength
half a Million of the Annual Rent of Ireland spent here. The Irish Wool is another Article of great Advantage, every Shilling expended for it bringing at least Five Shillings of Gain. The Products and Manufactures of England, and Foreign Goods imported hither, have great Vent in Ireland: English Cloth, Hops, Salt, Cyder, Iron-Ware, Groceries, and East-India Goods, are sold in considerable Quantities there. The Inhabitants of that Kingdom consume every Year more than 100000 l. worth of Coals and Lead dug out of the Bowels of the Earth here. But if the Popish Natives of Ireland were made Protestants, most or all of these Branches of Profit, would be much improved and advanced: Barbarity and Popery would fall together, they would become a more polite, as well as more orthodox People; and would make much greater Use of the Necessaries and Conveniencies of Life sent thither from England, than at present they do. Whereas the frequent Rebellions and Insurrections, which the Popish Religion and their Dependance upon Foreign Princes have rais'd in that Island, do not only deprive this Kingdom of these Benefits, but also put it to a vast Expence of Blood and Treasure, in reducing them to former Obedience; so that what is gained in Time of Peace, is lost by the frequent Returns of War in that Kingdom.

And Ireland it self would be much improved, and receive great Benefit hereby. If the Natives were once brought to quit their Dependance upon Foreign Princes, and the Expectations founded thereupon, there is no doubt, but they would apply themselves more heartily to Labour and Industry, than generally they do at present; by which means the Land would be improved, Trade would

would encrease, Rents would rise, and the Revenue of the Crown would be advanced.

And to mention no more, by the Conversion of the Irish, there would be added to the Church a great Number of Persons, who otherwise will not only be bred up in gross Ignorance and Superstition, but also have such Principles instilled into them, as will influence them to use all their Endeavours, to overturn our Constitution both in Church and State.

As these Considerations do much affect the Publick Interest of England and Ireland, so I make no doubt, but they will have their due Weight with all such as have the Welfare and Prosperity of the two Kingdoms at Heart.

But there are other Inducements to promote the Conversion of the Irish, which all pious and charitable Persons will especially lay to Heart. Every faithful Servant of Christ will consider, that there is nothing more becoming a Christian, nothing that can be less dispensed with, in one who believes a future State, than a zealous Endeavour to set forward the Salvation of Mankind, by bringing them to the Acknowledgment of the Truth. I might, if it were needful, give a Detail here of the many corrupt Doctrines, which the Irish Papists profess, and sinful Practices which they use, to the great Hazard of their immortal Souls: But they are well enough known. That which I would urge from thence is, that by converting them from their Superstition and Idolatry, we shall be the blessed Instruments of delivering their Souls from Darkness, and the Shadow of Death, and of bringing them to God; we shall recover them from the dangerous and miserable Condition wherein they are, into a safe and sure way to Salvation.

Salvation. And to excite all Men to be zealous and active in so pious and charitable an Undertaking, God hath promised greatly to reward it. Dan. 12. 3. They that turn many to Righteousness shall shine as the Stars for ever and ever. Nay, our gracious God hath assured us, that if we be industrious and successful in this Duty, he will deal more favourably with our selves, Jam. 5. 19, 20. Brethren, if any of you do err from the Faith, and one convert him; let him know, that he who converteth the Sinner from the Error of his Way, shall save a Soul from Death, and shall hide a Multitude of Sins. The great Love and Affection, that he shews for the Soul of his Brother, will move God, the Father of Spirits, and Jesus Christ, the great Lover and only Redeemer of Souls, to deal mercifully with his own Soul.

We have much Reason to be thankful to Almighty God, for the great Zeal and Piety of our Forefathers, in bringing about the happy Reformation in Religion here: If it had not been for their Diligence and Activity in asserting and propagating the Truth, it is very probable, that we had continued in the same deplorable State of spiritual Blindness and Ignorance in which the poor Irish are now involved; a just Sense of our Deliverance from Popish Darkness and Superstition, and of the many Benefits which we receive thereby, will influence us to imitate the laudable Piety of our Ancestors, and to perform the same good Offices to others, that we have received our selves.

But why should I use many Arguments to persuade any to set about this Work, when, as it may be hoped, the great Example and Success of this Duty in other Parts of the World, will animate and encourage us to undertake it. The Primitive

Primitive Charity for the Souls of Men, seems to revive in some Persons; the zealous Disposition of the first Christians appears in many now a-days, who use their constant and diligent Endeavours to propagate Christian Knowledge, and to enlighten the most distant Corners of the Earth. While they promote the Salvation of the most remote Nations, the Conversion of our Neighbours cannot with Decency be overlook'd any longer by us. Shall some Men spread the Truth with great Success abroad, and shall we neglect to do it at home, where we may not only behold with Pleasure the Fruit of our Labours, but also promote our own Interest and Security? What Paul and Barnabas said to the unbelieving Jews, Acts 13. 46. may be applied to the Irish; it was necessary that the Word of God should have been first spoken unto you. And indeed, it is extremely necessary in this Juncture; as Affairs stand between them and us, it cannot, without the greatest Reproach, be put off any longer. The Succession of Popish Clergy is prevented by the Laws of Ireland. In some Places they are sensibly decreasing; and if the Laws be put into Execution, the whole Order must be extinct within the Compass of a few Years. And Papists are excluded from any Office of Trust or Profit. Shall we then take their own Religion from them, and give them no other in its stead? Shall we deprive them of their own Teachers, and not supply them with Pastors, at whose Mouths they may learn the Law? Shall we depress them for not being Protestants, and at the same time, not endeavour to make them such? The Concern which we have for the Temporal and Eternal Happiness of our Fellow-Creatures; nay, the Regard which we bear to the Honour and Glory of our Church and and Nation, will not permit to do that which favours so much of Irreligion and Inhumanity. Self-Preservation, indeed, not only allows, but obliges us to weaken and discourage the Popish Interest in Ireland; but this would be done with a much better Grace, if thereunto we added our Endeavours to convert them.

And it is not unworthy of our Consideration, that the Irish are a Nation, who have many valuable Qualities which recommend them to us, and render it very well worth our while, to endeavour to get them more firmly joined and united to us in the same Body Politick, that so all the Parts may have the same Care one of another: They are generally of a strong and vigorous Constitution of Body, which helps very much to fit them for any sort of Labour and Business: And by means thereof, they become excellent Soldiers, after a little Use and Practice; our Enemies can give the best Account of this, in whose Service, and particularly at Cremona, they have so far distinguish'd themselves, that they are reckoned the best Men in the French Army; and therefore there is singular Care, taken to keep up and recruit the Irish Regiments, that are now in France. They are remarkable for natural Affection, Hospitality, and Charity, which argues great Generosity of Mind. They are very teachable and tractable, and have Genius's capable of the best Improvement, if they had Opportunity for it. They have a great Inclination to Devotion and Piety, and are very susceptible of Religious Impressions. And when any of them are so happy, as to be made sensible of the Errors and Corruptions of the Church of Rome, and to have sound Principles instilled instilled into them, they become very good Christians; very loyal Subjects, and true Friends to our excellent Constitution in Church and State.

So that, if we would consider how much our Enemies should lose, and we should gain by the Conversion of the Irish; if we would impartially ponder, how much it would help to secure the English Interest, to promote the Trade and Commerce, to preserve the Peace and Quiet, and to augment the Power and Strength of Her Majesty's Dominions. In a Word, if we would seriously lay to Heart the many Benefits, both Temporal and Eternal, which would thereby accrue both to them and to us; we should be perswaded, without any further Delay, to fall heartily about it.

There is no doubt, but every good Christian will be of this Mind, and will not only put his own Hand to so useful and necessary a Work; but will also heartily wish, that the same God, who commanded that the Gospel of Christ should at first be preached to the Nations in their own Language, may bless and prosper the Labours of all those, who endeavour to propagate the Truth by the same Means.

APPENDIX

Concerning the Irish Character:

A Translation of the English Liturgy into Irish being now in Press, and Six Thousand Copies of it Printed in the Irish Character, as far as the office of Baptism; I find it necessary (for the satisfaction of such, as are of Opinion, that it had been more expedient, to have Printed it in the English, or Roman Character) to assign the Reasons, which induced me to make use of the Irish Character.

The I R I S H Alphabet Consists of these 18 Letters.

a. b. c. d. e. f. g. h. i. l. m. n. o. p. r. s. t. u.

a. b. c. d. e. f. g. h. i. l. m. n. o. p. r. s. t. u.

And therefore when they are used in a Language which one understands, and is well acquainted with, they are known at the first view; as will appear by the following Example.

For though I be free from all men, yet have I made my self a servant unto all, that I might gain the more.

And unto the Jew, I became as a Jew, that I might gain the Jew; to them that are under the law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law; 1 Cor. 9. 19. 20.

In the Irish Language there is much use made of Vowels, and far less of Consonants than in the English: And frequently where Consonants are used, h is added sometimes to mollify their Sound, sometimes to turn them into an Aspiration, and sometimes to extinguish altogether the Pronunciation of a Consonant: By which means it makes a Ninth part of the Language, and would take up a great deal of room in very many Words, if it were set down at large. e. g.

Ḃ dhē bhī do bhīathar no dhionchabhathach dhamh.

Ḃ dē bī do bhīathar no dhionchabhathach dām.

For this Reason, it is neither Printed nor Written immediately before or after a Consonant, but noted by a Point over the Consonant, to which it is added; as b, with a Point thus over it, stands for bh. And by this expedient, as the ninth part of the charge of Printing is saved; so the whole Word is represented in less bulk to the Eye,

Eye, whereby the Language is rendered much more easy to be Read, than when the h's are set down at large ; this is confirmed by the Experience of such, as have skill in the Language, and will evidently appear by comparing the Words above written with one another.

In the next place there are many compositions of Letters in Irish, which have not the same force in English. bh and mh, are pronounced sometimes as v Consonant. dh and gh, have sometimes the pronunciation of y, and sometimes a peculiar pronunciation, not used in other Languages. rh and th have only the force of an Aspiration. And when f and h are joined, they both lose their Sound. Upon these accounts it is expedient to use a Character at least somewhat different ; because one who is Learning to Read the Irish in the English Character, is very much perplexed, when, almost in every Word, he must be obliged to take notice, that they have a different force in the Irish.

This being premised, it will be manifest, that there is no Font of Letters now extant in England or Ireland, in which it would be so fit to Print the Irish COMMON PRAYER BOOK, in order to answer the End for which it is designed, as that provided by Mr. Boyle, in which it is now a Printing.

For in the first place, as I have already observed, h is always noted by a Point over the Consonant to which it belongs ; and this prevents the great length of Words, which would otherwise very much clog and encumber the Irish Language, and render it very difficult to be Read by Learners, and especially by such as cannot Speak it beforehand.

And then the difference of the Characters, although it be but small, will prevent the Readers having the same Idea of their Force in the Irish Language, which they have in the English.

It is objected, I know, that every one will not be ready to learn an Alphabet; and that such as know the English Alphabet, have no more to do, but immediately to enter upon Reading of Irish in the English Character. But these objections are made by such as are not well enough acquainted with the Irish Character and Language, and they proceed wholly from want of Skill and Knowledge in them both. For although the Figure of Six Irish Letters may differ from the English, yet their Dissimilitude is so very small, that whoever knows the English Alphabet, may be also Master of the Irish in less than an Hour. And as to the other part of the Objection; any one, who will be pleased to make the trial, will find, that although he can Read English in the greatest perfection, yet he shall not be able to Read Irish in the English Character, without first learning the Elements of the Irish Tongue, and understanding the Power of their Letters, and of the several compositions of them; to which purpose, he will find the Irish Character much more useful and subservient, than any other.

For these Reasons, no doubt, the Irish Character hath been used by the best judges in this matter. When the New Testament, and Common Prayer were Printed in Irish, in the beginning of the last Century, there were two Arch-Bishops, and one Bishop of Ireland, and Mr. Kearney, Treasurer of St. Patricks there, concerned in the Work, who all understood the Language very well; and therefore must be supposed to know the fitness of the the Character in which the Language should be Printed. And they Printed those Books in the Irish Characters, which Queen Elizabeth had some time before sent to Ireland, at her own Charge, for that End.

These Characters were lost or destroyed in the great Rebellion; and therefore, when Mr. Boyle, resolved to Print the whole BIBLE in the Irish Tongue, he had a Font of Irish Types, cast on purpose; which belike so great a Man would not have done, without being first well assured of their usefulness. And after he had got the whole BIBLE Printed in Them, he sent several Copies to the Highlands, (where as I am credibly informed by some Persons of great Honour and worth, who are Natives of that Country) they are useful, and much valued; as being easy to be Read, and also being remaining badges of their Nation, of which they have no small Opinion. And the difference between them, and the Irish BIBLES, Printed in the English Character, in Octavo is plainly this; that the Quarto's are more legible, and better adapted to the Language, and the Octavo's cheaper and better fitted to the Purse of common People. This I know, that in Ireland, the Highlanders can Read the BIBLE, in the Irish Character; the difference of the English and Irish Characters being so small, that there is no difficulty in so doing; and it is strange that the same thing should be easy, and intelligible to a Highlander in Ireland, which is otherwise in the Northern Part of great Britain.

The Reasons hitherto mentioned for Printing Irish Books in the Irish Character, are taken from the Nature and Idioms of the Language. There is one Argument still remaining, which will go very far, far, and have great Weight with any one; that seriously considers of the most effectual Method of Converting Men to the Truth; and that is, that the Irish Character is more acceptable to the Irish Nation, than any other. It hath been used by that People for many Ages, they are therefore very fond of it, and like Books written in it, much better than in any other Letter. I have been told by some Persons Worthy of Credit, that several of the Irish Natives have refused to Read the Irish Bible in the English Character, when they would at the same time read it in the Irish. I know from my own Experience, that they have a great Value for Books in the Language and Character of their own Nation : Religious Treatises, especially, come with Advantage to them in this manner, for they Love any thing that is Irish, because it gives them hopes of keeping up their Nation. This, I question not, is the true Reason, why they sent from far and near for a small Volume of Sermons Printed in their own Language and Character last Year, and why it was handed about, and much Read among them. Even the Protestant Gentlemen of that Nation, have not a mind that the Character should be disused, and some of them, who justly deserve great Respect and Esteem, have signified little less to my self. And therefore, it is not Expedient, to disgust them in so small a Matter. The Truth will without doubt, meet with much Opposition ; many will not only be loth to admit it, but think themselves concerned to resist it; and therefore it should be proposed to them with all imaginable Advantages; They, whose Temporal Interest it will be, to withstand the Progress of the Protestant Religion, will be sure to use all their Endeavours to prejudice others against it, and raise many Objections against the manner in which it is presented to 'em. They will labour to make them believe, that we have a design to destroy both their Church and Nation; and Popish Emissaries, will probably take an Opportunity, if we should forbear the use of their own Letters, to supply them with Romish Books in their own Language and Character from France, Spain, Flanders, or Rome, where there are Irish Presses. And therefore it seems more adviseable to make this Condescension to their Prepossessions, and Infirmities, as St. Paul did in other Cases, 1 Cor. 9. 20, 21, 22. Unto the Jew, I became a Jew, that I might gain the Jews; to them that are under the Law, as under the Law, that I might gain them that are under the Law; To them that are without Law, as without Law, (being not without Law to God, but under the Law to Christ) that I might gain them that are without Law. To the weak became I as weak, that I might gain the weak: I am made all things to all Men, that I might by all means save some.

Finally, it is not unworthy our Consideration, that by disusing the Irish Character, we shall be likely to lose the Benefit of such Old Manuscripts, as are Written in that Language, and which are considerable in the Opinion of Mr. Lluyd, and others.

Edm. Gibson.

A PROPOSAL for the Conversion of the Popish Natives of IRELAND to the Protestant Religion, by Printing the Bible, Liturgy, an Exposition of the Church Catechism, and other useful Treatises, in Irish; that so they may be instructed, and have the Offices of Religion performed to them, in their own Language: As also by Erecting Charity-Schools, for the Education of the Irish Children gratis, in the English Tongue and Protestant Religion.

WHEREAS divers Laws have been lately made in Ireland, to weaken the Popish Interest there; and one Statute particularly hath been Enacted, to prevent a Succession of the Popish Clergy; whereby the Number of Romish Priests is already decreased, and if the Laws be put in Execution, the whole Order must be extinct within a few Years: So that it is to be hoped, these Means may, with the Divine Blessing, facilitate the Conversion of the Irish, if in this seasonable Juncture, they be seconded with proper Methods of Instructing them, and convincing them of their Errors.

And whereas, by the Experience both of the present and past Ages, it is found, that the Method used and enjoined by our blessed Saviour and his Apostles, in propagating the Gospel, viz. by Instructing every Nation, and performing the Offices of Religion to them in their own Language, hath been most successful and effectual, in converting many of the Irish Nation to the established Religion,

And whereas the Want of the necessary Means of propagating the true Reformed Religion among the Natives of Ireland, is a great Hindrance of their Conversion; and therefore, in order to accomplish so good a Work, it will be requisite, that the Holy Bible, Liturgy, an Exposition of the Church Catechism, and other useful Treatises, be printed in Irish: That a competent Number of Ministers duly qualify'd, to instruct the Natives, and to perform the Offices of Religion to them in their own Language, be provided and encouraged by a suitable Maintenance: And that Charity-Schools be erected for the Instruction of the Irish Children gratis, in the English Tongue, and in the Protestant Religion.

And whereas the Reverend Mr. John Richardson, Rector of Belturbet in Ireland, hath, with the Assistance of others skilful in the Language, translated the Book of Common-Prayer, and Lewis's Exposition of the Church Catechism, into Irish; and intends to print them with one Column in English, and the other in Irish, and hath already made a considerable Progress in printing the Liturgy.

And lastly, whereas, the Conversion of the Popish Natives of Ireland to the Protestant Religion, is a Work, which, besides its direct Tendency to promote the Glory of God, and Salvation of Souls, would also very much help to preserve the Quiet and Tranquillity, and to encrease the Strength and Wealth of Her Majesty's Dominions.

We whose Names are underwritten, in order to encourage and promote so pious and charitable a Design, have subscribed and payed the respective Sums annexed to our Names.
